Question Arises Of Who Bosses Lincoln General

By CYNTHIA JOHNSON and H. L. HOFFMASTER
Star Staff Writers

The tie that binds Lincoln General Hospital to Lincoln's city government is showing some strain. And some people would not mind seeing the tie cut, making Lincoln General a private hospital.

In their opinion, the grounds for such a "divorce" were augmented recently when Mayor Helen Boosalis and the City Council refused to appoint a doctor to the hospital's board of trustees. At present, no doctor sits on the board.

The hospital board's nominating committee had asked the mayor to appoint a doctor.

That request and the mayor's refusal is the micro issue that represents the macro situation . . . the larger question of who is "boss."

Independence Nearly Total

Board chairman James LeRossignol, supported by board attorney Norman Krivosha and most board members, notes that the board is administrative and has an ordinance-directed, nearly total independence from city government.

Exceptions to that autonomy, LeRossignol points out, are that the mayor appoints board members, and city government has purse-string control because the council approves or disapproves the board's budget requests and rate adjustments.

Mayor Boosalis prefers to emphasize what she calls the "semi-autonomous" nature of the board.

The legal tie between Lincoln General and city government dates back to the early 1920s and the initial fund-raising efforts of a private hospital organization called the Lincoln Hospital Association.

The association was collecting money to build a hospital for the city, and it entered into an agreement with the city for the joint financing of the construction of what became Lincoln General Hospital. Title to the hospital was subsequently transferred to the city.

In 1965, $3.6 million in revenue bonds were issued in the name of the city for the construction of a new hospital. But those bonds are repayable out of hospital, not city, revenues.

Budget Technically City's

Technically, the hospital's current $10 million budget is part of the city's budget. However, at present, the hospital is unsubsidized since it earns that entire amount.

The exact nature of city government's control over the board was demonstrated several months ago when Mayor Boosalis appointed "consumer representative" Mrs. Janet Coleman to the board instead of Dr. Dwight Cherry, who was the board nominating committee's choice.

Mayor Boosalis, in an interview with The Star, refused to state her reasons for not appointing Cherry, except to say that the board should be representative of the community.

At present, the 11-member board is heavily weighted towards representation by the business and legal community. Ten members are bankers, investment experts, marketing people, lawyers and businessmen.

LeRossignol, who is advertising director for the Journal-Star Printing Co., says the complexities involved in the multimillion-dollar hospital operation require such professional expertise.

In addition, "we obviously deal with medicine and therefore must have a doctor on the board to help us with those kinds of issues."

City Council member Bob Sikyta — who is one of two council representatives on the hospital board — said the board "should have a little more power at least to have their recommendations (for board appointments) listened to."

The board "is more than an advisory" body, Sikyta said. "I don't think people (both citizens and some City Hall officials) understand that."

There's A Communications Problem

City Council member Sue Bailey admitted that there is a communications problem between the hospital and the city because an administrative board, like that at Lincoln General, tends to "go off alone with its single interest," failing to respond to other governmental interests.

"An administrative board is quite capable . . . of producing a very efficient, effective service," Mrs. Bailey said. But it may not always serve the citizens in the best way possible because it has its own interests to look out for.

Speaking of administrative boards generally, Mrs. Bailey said she would prefer to see government-related entities organized into departments or divisions directly responsible to the mayor.

John Robinson, who is, like Sikyta, a City Council representative on the Lincoln General board, said he would like to see Lincoln General become more of a governmental institution. He feels that "generally speaking, people would like to see" that happen.

Such a change, he said, would hopefully make the hospital's services more accessible to a greater number of people through cost containment.

Services, Costs Comparable

Lincoln General's services and costs are presently comparable to those of privately owned hospitals in the city.

On the other hand, there are those, like Sikyta who would not object to the idea of Lincoln General becoming a totally private institution, and perhaps leasing or buying the hospital facility and land from the city.

Sikyta and LeRossignol see a more efficient, responsive and competitive hospital if the board were free of politics and municipal government.

Mrs. Bailey said if the hospital felt it was "so inhibited by its relationship with government" that it could not adequately serve the public, she would support a separation of the two. But she added that she currently does not perceive such a "crisis" situation.

Robinson said he does not believe such a split will occur because it would require a change in the city charter, and also because there is not "widespread public support" for it.

Besides, Robinson said, the conflict between Lincoln General and City Hall — to whatever extent it exists — is "healthy." It provides for "checks and balances."

Time Gained For Solution

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Leftist Moslem leaders agreed Sunday night to extend the shaky cease-fire until the end of April to give more time for a political settlement in Lebanon's year-long civil war.

Overall Moslem chieftain Kamal Jumblatt made the announcement as mortar and grenade explosions thundered over Beirut's downtown hotel district and sporadic clashes flared elsewhere in the country. Police said 56 persons were killed and 25 persons kidnaped throughout the day.

Jumblatt earlier complained that two more Syrian battalions had entered Lebanon's mountainous border region, bringing the total Syrian commitment here to 5,000-6,000 troops. Previous estimates have put the number at about 2,000.

The troops are believed to be trying to prevent arms from reaching the warring factions as Syrian President Hafez Assad pressures for a settlement of the year-old civil war that has killed 15,000 persons.

Jumblatt said he has demanded an explanation for "excessive Syrian military presence" in Lebanon from special U.S. peacemaking envoy L. Dean Brown. After long warning against Syrian military intervention, Washington has tacitly backed Damascus' limited military moves so far.

Jumblatt called for a "freeze" in Syrian, French and American mediation at least until parliament elects a replacement for President Suleiman Franjeh. The Syrian-imposed truce was to have ended Monday.

"But even then, the cease-fire can never be endless," said Ibrahim Kheilat, leader of Jumblatt's largest leftist militia, the Am-bushers. "Unless Franjeh's replacement is completed shortly, we will have to decide the situation on the basis of a victor and a vanquished."

Parliament amended the constitution Saturday to allow immediate election of a new president. But Franjeh, a stubborn Maronite Christian, has yet to sign the amendment as required by law and has given no public indication whether he will actually step down even if Parliament elects a replacement.

Reliable reports say the Syrian soldiers — some disguised as Palestinian guerrillas from the Syrian-backed Saiga group — are helping to set up an arms blockade against leftist Lebanese Moslems, their Palestinian allies and Christian private armies. Syrian gunboats are known to be patrolling the coast to prevent arms deliveries by sea.

"No one asked the Syrians to intervene," Jumblatt complained during a television interview Saturday night. "But the Syrian army did, at a time when we are nearing a solution and our Syrian brothers are supposed to help us rather than escalate trouble."

President Ford said Saturday that no party in the Lebanese conflict has taken any "rash action," indicating at least tacit U.S. acceptance of the growing Syrian involvement.

President Assad is trying to foster a compromise that would give Lebanon's 60% Moslem majority more power in government while protecting the rights of the Christian minority which until now has had the upper hand.

His concern stems in part from fear that an uncontrolled "confrontation state" with Israel would emerge from a total leftist victory, upsetting his calculations for dealing with Tel Aviv and the Palestinian guerrillas.

$50 Million Bank Heist In Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Gunmen roaming the battle-ravaged urban jungle of Beirut's financial district have pulled off three of the biggest bank robberies of all time, escaping with at least $50 million, according to officials.

In the first of the three robberies, bandits blasted open the vault of the British Bank of the Middle East and rifled the safe deposit boxes, where sources say jewelry dealers and wealthy Lebanese stored large amounts of gold, jewels and cash.

That robbery occurred in January, before a Syrian-mediated truce between warring Christian and Moslem militias took effect and lasted about six weeks, the sources said.

Safe deposit vaults were reported cleaned out at two more major banks — the Banco di Roma and Bank Misr-Liban — amid renewed fighting last week.

"The identity of the malefactors is known to all," claimed Raymond Edde, a prominent Christian presidential candidate and lawyer for the Banco di Roma. He did not elaborate, but his comment was taken to support the near-unanimous belief that the robbers are radical Palestinian guerrillas.

Lucien Dahdah, a former finance minister and chairman of the holding company of Almahshrek, one of Beirut's largest banks, said $50 million was stolen from the British bank's vault, but another source said the bank reported to its head that an absolute minimum of $20 million in valuables had been stolen.

"Only the owners knew what was in the (safe deposit) boxes. It could be $50 million or it could be $100 million or more," said Gabriel Badaro, vice president of Beirut's Chamber of Commerce.

Other bankers here agreed that $50 million was a very conservative estimate for the total stolen from all three banks.

One bank source said he had been told one box in the British bank contained $8 million in cash and jewels, and another box, mangled but overlooked by the robbers, still held $400,000 in Lebanese pounds when found by bank officials.

The $20 million figure, if accurate, would make the British Bank robbery the largest in history. The Guinness Book of World Records says the theft of the German National Bank's reserves, $10.3 million in gold and cash, at the end of World War II is the greatest robbery on record.

Sources said robberies at the Banco di Roma and Bank Misr-Lebanon last week were more professional than the heist at the British Bank, where the bandits used crowbars on safe deposit boxes after blowing the vault open.

Robbers managed to open the Banco di Roma's two-foot-thick, 10-ton vault door with no sign of heavy blasting. "Either it is the same gang and they are getting better or other groups with more expertise are joining in," said a Lebanese bank official.

Ten other small bank branches have been looted and damaged, including a branch of Almahshrek, which is 30 per cent owned by the Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, and French, Canadian and Arab-owned institutions.

Gunmen reportedly tried to enter a branch of the Jordanian-owned Arab Bank in the Hamra shopping district but were driven off by guards in a gunfight that left two dead. And an Almahshrek branch in the Hamra was closed for two days this week after gunmen were seen in the area.

Both banks have large safe deposit vaults. Badaro said bank deposits have not been affected by the wave of robberies. He said banks keep their cash on deposit with Lebanon's central bank and draw only what they will need on a daily basis.

Arraignment Set In Fatal Shooting

A 25-year-old Lincoln man, Mark Thompson, will be arraigned Monday morning in connection with the shooting death of Thomas Smith, 26 Saturday night.

County Atty. Ron Lahners said Smith was apparently shot following an argument at a residence at 1817 N. 30th. The shooting, he added, apparently occurred inside the residence, but Smith's body was found outside.

An autopsy Sunday revealed that Smith died of a wound from a .22 caliber rifle. Lahners said Smith was shot in the upper right chest. Thompson was taken into custody at the scene. Lahners added

Church: Avoid African Intervention

CHURCH: . . . give Russians enough rope.

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Sen. Frank Church said Sunday the U.S. should avoid an interventionist policy in Africa.

America should "not be so terribly panicky" about the evidence of Soviet and Cuban intervention in African countries, he told a Lincoln press conference.

"We learned in Vietnam that there are limits to what intervention can accomplish."

The Russians have "failed to form satellites" from their previous interventionist efforts in the Middle East, he said.

Their African efforts may be no more successful.

'Return The Favor'

"The Russians gave us sufficient rope to hang ourselves in Southeast Asia. I'd like to return the favor."

Church, campaigning in Nebraska for the Democratic presidential nomination, said he would "not involve the U.S. in wars in third world countries where the stakes are not sufficient" to warrant action.

Later, in an interview in his hotel suite, the senator elaborated on his foreign policy views.

The U.S., he said, is on dangerous ground in arming both sides in the Middle East and runs the risk of being "blamed by both sides" if war erupts.

'Aid An Inducement'

"I would not be adverse to some measure of economic aid for both Egypt and Syria as an inducement to move toward a final settlement of their remaining issues" with Israel, he said.

Church said he would be opposed to any use of American troops in the Middle East.

The only condition on that would be if the Soviet Union made a move. Then, I could not prejudice what the U.S. should do. It is a region of enormous importance."

On other matters, Church told the news conference that too much has been made of former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter's use of the words "ethnic purity" in defending the character of established neighborhoods.

"I think it's one of those tempests that campaigns bring on," the Idaho senator said.

"A man ought not to be judged on the basis of two ill-chosen words."

Rather, Carter should be judged on his record as governor, and that record contains nothing that would justify any contention that he is a racist, Church said.

Thus Church became the only one of Carter's key rivals to brush aside the matter. Both Sen. Henry Jackson and Congressman Morris Udall have attempted to raise it as an issue in the Pennsylvania presidential primary.

Carter, the big winner in the early primaries, is far from holding the Democratic nomination "in the bag," Church said.

Any such forecast would be based on "an assumption that the voters in the Midwest and the West will simply fall into step with the decisions in the eastern primaries," he said.

Independence Expected
Church said he expects western voters to be "independent minded," and make their own judgments.

It is in the western primaries where Church will make his bid for the nomination, beginning with Nebraska on May 11.

"You are looking at a very rare specimen," he told newsmen. "A Democratic presidential candidate who has yet to lose an election."

Church spoke Sunday to a Young Democrats convention and visited a Catholic Fair in Lincoln. Monday's schedule includes a noon address to University of Nebraska students.

We need to do well in Nebraska," he noted. "This is where it starts for me."

'Race Wide Open'
The race, he told Young Democrats, is "wide open" and he hopes to "score in the contests of last impression" in the western states in May and June.

The nation now suffers from a leadership of weakness and fear, he said, one which would pardon former President Nixon while doing nothing more to eliminate abuse of power in government than suggesting "cosmetic changes" in the agencies which form the intelligence community.

Church said he would bring the FBI, the CIA and the IRS back within the reins of the law.

Rallies Against Teng Spread To Provinces

TOKYO (AP) — China's army vowed to "deal resolute blows" to supporters of ousted Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, as mass rallies condemning him spread to five Chinese provinces, Peking broadcasts said Sunday.

"From offices to barracks, from sea islands to frontier outposts, a revolutionary atmosphere of unity in struggle now prevails in these People's Revolutionary Army units stationed across the country," the official Hsinhua news agency said.

The agency added that mass rallies against Teng were held in Shansi, Honan, Sbeni, Yunnan and Shantung provinces in the past few days, attended by workers, soldiers, women and peasants. As many as 300,000 attended some rallies, the agency said.

The broadcast quoted Liu Hsing-yuan, commander of Chengtu units, as saying the struggle would go on to a greater depth, meaning there still were backers of Teng's policies to be won over or purged.

The reference to victory meant Chairman Mao Tse-tung's removal of Teng from all Communist party and government posts and his elevation of Hua Kuo-feng to full premier and party first vice chairman last Wednesday.

Radio Peking reported late Saturday that pro-Teng demonstrators killed one person in Chengchow in Honan province during last week's protests preceding the purge of Teng.

It was also reported Saturday, by Hsinhua, that President Ford had written Hua congratulating him on his appointment as premier and advising him that the United States is determined to complete normalization of U.S.-Chinese relations. Ford said Thomas S. Gates, the newly-appointed American envoy to the U.S. Liaison Office in Peking, will be going there in May.

Teng has been accused of ignoring Mao's ideological struggle against bourgeois influences and concentrating on economic advances, even if this meant using experts who were not ideologically pure.

The official press said these policies would have meant the restoration of capitalism and exploitation of the workers and peasants in China.

Hsinhua said Wang Pi-cheng, commander of Kunming military units, declared that the army "will never tolerate sabotage and disruption by a handful of counterrevolutionaries . . .

"We will obey orders from Chairman Mao and the Party Central Committee in all our actions, resolutely smash the class enemy's sabotage and carry through to the end the struggle to beat back the rightist-deviationist attempt."

"Rightist deviationist" is the label for Teng's policies.

Hsinhua said Chengtu's Liu added, "The unrepentant capitalist roader Teng Hsiao-ping is the general representative of the bourgeoisie."

"He has refused to accept the criticism and help of Chairman Mao, the Party Central Committee and the people of the whole country, obstinately clung to his bourgeois stand and set himself up against the revolutionary people."

Welfare Spending Soars; Jobless Fathers A Cause

Washington (AP) — The nation's family welfare expenditures soared by 21.4% last year, partly because of the growing ranks of jobless fathers, the government said Sunday.

A record $24.8 billion was paid out in 1975 for Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC). Medicaid for the poor and relief programs run by state and local governments.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare issued a news release focusing on family welfare statistics for last December which rose over the previous month but at a slower rate than the same month a year earlier.

The department had the annual figures available but did not issue them as it had in past years because of the political sensitivity of the welfare issue in an election year, informed sources said.

The department issued the figures for all of 1975 at a reporter's request. It did not make the information generally available as it has in past years in April because of the political sensitivity of the welfare issue in an election year, informed sources said.

In response to a query, HEW said a cumulative total of 266,000 families were added to AFDC rolls in 1975, an 8.3% increase to nearly 3.5 million families.

The number of individual AFDC recipients increased by 479,000, a 4.4% increase to more than 11.3 million persons, indicating that the average welfare family of today has fewer members.

The biggest jump was the 33.6% increase in the number of welfare families headed by unemployed fathers, a program now in operation in 28 states.

About 30,000 unemployed-father families joined AFDC rolls in 1975, HEW said, for a new total of 120,000 families with 527,000 recipients. Families headed by mothers still formed the bulk of the AFDC rolls, however. The government said there was a cumulative increase in that category of 236,000 families with 361,000 new welfare beneficiaries, most of them children.

General assistance programs, run by state and local governments without federal matching funds, added 145,000 families last year. That was a 27.8% increase to 667,000 families, with 965,000 recipients.

The HEW figures showed that the nation's total public assistance outlays rose from $17.7 billion in 1973 to $20.4 billion in 1974 and $24.8 billion in 1975.

The largest increases in the spending figures were 34.8% to $43.9 million for payments to families headed by jobless fathers, a 34% increase to $1.5 billion in general assistance, and a 23.7% increase to $13.9 billion in Medicaid health care for the poor.

The unemployment rate last year averaged 8.5%, compared with 5.6% in 1974.

AFDC cash payments exceeded $9.2 billion last year, up 16.3%. Monthly payments averaged $220.22 per family and $67.75 per recipient, up from $204.97 and $60.82 respectively in 1974.

The state and local general assistance programs paid an average of $141.96 per family and $38.14 per recipient last year.

Attack On Clear-Cutting Has Repercussions In Woods, Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — A legal assault by environmentalists against clear-cutting is causing cutbacks in timber production and forcing Congress to consider writing new laws on managing the national forests.

Clear-cutting, the harvesting of all trees in an area, is under court-ordered bans in the national forests of five states.

The Sierra Club and other environmental groups that brought the suits say clear-cutting scars the landscape. Logging interests say nationwide restriction on clear-cutting would cause increases in the price of homes and anything else in which lumber is used.

As the logging industry and environmental groups tug from opposite sides, Congress is trying to write new criteria for managing the national forests. About 40% of the nation's lumber comes from the national forests.

Hearings were held last month by a House Agriculture subcommittee and jointly by Senate Agriculture and Interior subcommittees on a variety of bills dealing with clear-cutting.

None of the committees has voted yet on any of the bills, but there is widespread agreement in both houses that new legislation is needed because of the court cases.

There are three basic approaches embodied in the welter of bills:

—Spelling out forest management standards, including strict limits on when clear-cutting can be practiced. Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., and Rep. George E. Brown Jr., D-Calif., have introduced such bills.

—Permitting the National Forest Service to use clear-cutting when it believes it is consistent with professional forest management techniques. Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., and Bob Packwood, R-Ore., and Reps. Robert Duncan, D-Ore., and Harold T. Johnson and B.F. Sisk, both D-Calif., are sponsoring bills to do this.

—Establishing a moratorium on enforcement of the court decisions while Congress considers a more permanent policy. Sens. Mike Gravel, D-

Alaska, and Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, and Rep. Roy A. Taylor, D-N.C., have written such bills.

Environmentalists are supporting the Randolph-Brown approach, while the industry is pressing for the Humphrey-Packwood bill.

The legislative flurry comes in an area left untouched since the 1897 law that established the U.S. Forest Service.

A U.S. District Court in Alaska and the Fourth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, in a case affecting four eastern states, have ruled that the 1897 law requires that trees must be physiologically mature before they can be cut. Trees then must be individually marked for cutting, according to the rulings.

The industry says such a procedure makes it too costly to obtain timber.

The appeals court, ruling last August, said, "The appropriate forum to resolve this complex and controversial issue is not the courts but that of Congress."

The district court judge in Alaska conceded that the 79-year-old law as an anachronism in view of modern forestry techniques but said it was up to Congress to change the law.

The appeals court decision has drastically reduced timber sales in Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina.

The Forest Service said it has cut back its timber sales to 10% of what had been planned from the national forests in the four states.

After the Alaska ruling, the Forest Service was asked to cancel the largest timber contract it ever let on public forest land.

The request for "mutual cancellation" came from Champion International Inc., which had a 50-year contract to harvest 8.75 billion board feet of Alaska timber. The Forest Service is considering the request, made last month.

Gravel said the district court ruling threatens to plunge parts of Alaska into economic depression. Without a moratorium this year on enforcement of the ruling "Alaska would go forward toward economic disaster," he said.

The government decided against appealing the appeals court decision to the Supreme Court, thereby avoiding the possibility of a nationwide ban on clear-cutting. However, environmentalists can bring suits wherever they believe that the Forest Service has violated the 1897 law.

If clear-cutting is banned in Oregon "we would suffer immeasurable disruption in Oregon's largest industry," Gov. Robert W. Straub said.

Packwood said the rulings forbid the Forest Service "from using a scientifically accepted forestry method which has been developed over a long period of time and which is necessary to manage and perpetuate forest stands."

Brown, whose bill would limit clear-cutting to 25-acre areas and place other restrictions on the practice, has a different view. "Ample evidence has been submitted over the last five years regarding the dangerous soil erosion created by large clear-cuts on fragile slopes or temperamental soil conditions," he said.

Mountain Pine Beetle Killing Millions Of Trees

PENDLETON, Ore. (AP) — An invasion of the mountain pine beetle is killing a billion board feet of timber in Northeastern Oregon.

And both federal and private foresters say nothing can be done to stop it. All of that timber will be dead by 1986.

The trees, all lodgepole pine, represent enough lumber to build 100,000 homes. They cover a million acres, an area roughly the size of the state of Delaware.

David Graham, director of forest insect and disease management for the U.S. Forest Service in Oregon and Washington, flew over the infested area, then said: "It's hard to imagine how big it is. It's dead lodgepole pine, you might say, from horizon to horizon."

The Forest Service is considering a 21-year, $133 million project to remove the dead trees to lessen the chance that a massive fire will cause further economic and esthetic damage.

If there is no attempt to remove the trees, the Forest Service estimates the chance of a large fire will be multiplied 10 times. Graham said fire suppression costs could reach $200 million.

But the proposal developed by personnel of the Umatilla, Walla-Walla and Malheur National Forests has not been approved by the upper echelons of the Forest Service. There is doubt that such a large appropriation will be proposed by the Ford administration during an election year.

And there is disagreement over whether the salvage work is necessary, considering the expense.

Earl Sandvig of Portland, who worked for the Forest Service for 36 years before retiring, was supervisor of the Beaverhead National Forest in Montana where he witnessed one of the worst mountain pine beetle epidemics in recorded history.

In the 1930s, it killed four billion board feet of lodgepole pine. The Forest Service budgeted $100,000 to try to stop the Montana outbreak and clean up the mess.

"Finally we just gave up," Sandvig said.

There were predictions of a huge fire in the dead forest, he said.

But there was no fire.

"Today if you saw that area it's just absolutely beautiful," Sandvig said. "Nature has ways of harvesting overmature trees. One of them is the mountain pine beetle."

Rallies Against Teng Spread To Provinces

TOKYO (AP) — China's army vowed to "deal resolute blows" to supporters of ousted Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, as mass rallies condemning him spread to five Chinese provinces, Peking broadcasts said Sunday.

"From offices to barracks, from sea islands to frontier outposts, a revolutionary atmosphere of struggle now prevails in these People's Revolutionary Army units stationed across the country," the official Hsinhua news agency said.

The agency added that mass rallies against Teng were held in Shansi, Honan, Shensi, Yunnan and Shantung provinces in the past few days, attended by workers, soldiers, women and peasants. As many as 300,000 attended some rallies, the agency said.

"He has refused to accept the criticism and help of Chairman Mao, the Party Central Committee and the people of the whole country, obstinately clung to his bourgeois stand and set himself up against the revolutionary people."

Earl Sandvig of Portland, who worked for the Forest Service for 36 years before retiring, was supervisor of the Beaverhead National Forest in Montana where he witnessed one of the worst mountain pine beetle epidemics in recorded history.

In the 1930s, it killed four billion board feet of lodgepole pine. The Forest Service budgeted $100,000 to try to stop the Montana outbreak and clean up the mess.

"Finally we just gave up," Sandvig said.

There were predictions of a huge fire in the dead forest, he said.

But there was no fire.

"Today if you saw that area it's just absolutely beautiful," Sandvig said. "Nature has ways of harvesting overmature trees. One of them is the mountain pine beetle."

Survey: Pro-Abortion Stand Not Politically Dangerous

By LOUIS HARRIS

The widespread feeling that it is politically dangerous for a presidential candidate to support legalized abortion turns out to be wrong.

This is the conclusion of a Harris Survey conducted among a national cross section of 1,512 adults to determine first where people stand on the abortion issue and second whether they would vote against a candidate if he took a stand in favor of legalized abortion.

The results are clear. In the past year public opinion on the abortion issue has not changed, and a solid 54 39/100 majority supports the U.S. Supreme Court decision that legalizes abortions up to three months pregnancy. A year ago a 54-38% majority took the same position.

In light of these findings one might ask why most presidential candidates have tried to avoid taking a stand on the issue or have taken positions in opposition to legalized abortion. The reason seems to be that they have reacted to the right-to-life movement which has been highly vocal in this political year.

ly abandoned her candidacy.

The latest Harris Survey spells out why the anti-abortion movement has less political bite than it seems. It found that 46% of those who oppose the Supreme Court decision would either certainly or probably vote against a candidate they otherwise would support if he took a pro-abortion stand. This means that 18% of the electorate could be swung by the anti-abortion movement.

The Harris Survey also asked the 54% majority who favor the court's decision allowing abortions how they would feel if a candidate with whom they agreed on basic issues took an anti-abortion stand. Only 26% of this group said they would either certainly or probably vote against him. This change among the pro-abortion group involves 15% of the electorate.

When the swings of the anti-abortion and pro-abortion votes are weighed against each other the result is a net advantage of only 3% for the anti-abortion forces.

Statistically speaking this is not a significant figure and it means that the political dangers of taking a forthright pro-abortion stand have been considerably exaggerated by both the media and the politicians themselves. Worried about how they would fare at the polls the candidates tended to react to a vigorous and highly vocal group who object to legalized abortion. Careful analysis shows that support for the Supreme Court decision would have little effect on the final outcome of the presidential election.

Catholics Warned Against Unauthorized Latin Mass

Omaha (AP) — Catholics have been warned by Archbishop Daniel E. Sheehan against attending unauthorized Latin liturgies in Omaha.

Archbishop Sheehan said Pope Paul has ordered the new English liturgy to be used in the Catholic Church and 'it is as simple as that.'

'Any Catholic who is a loyal member of the church should conform to current regulations and rules of the church and not fall back on the authority of some Pope who lived 400 years ago,' he said.

The archbishop's comments came after he learned that a priest from Louisville, Ky., has been traveling to Omaha every month to conduct traditional Latin liturgies at various locations in the city.

The Rev. James Wathen of Louisville said he is conducting the liturgies in Omaha and elsewhere in the country because he feels that the new Mass is 'sacriligious.'

The Most Rev. Henry Soenneker, bishop of the Diocese of Owensboro, Kentucky, said Father Wathen is a member of the diocese but he is not in good standing in the church.

Bishop Soenneker said Father Wathen 'is not allowed to offer Mass or hear confessions because he does not accept the Mass of Pope Paul, and for that reason we cannot permit him to teach (the new Mass). Otherwise, he is a good man, honest, but extreme in this particular field. We cannot tolerate it.'

Father Wathen said he has a following of about 30 persons in Omaha, and about 250 persons show up regularly for his Latin liturgy in Louisville.

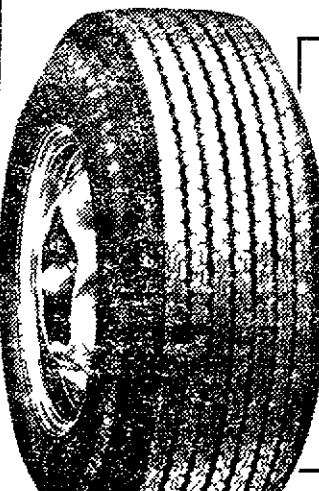

He said he is one of about 100 priests worldwide who are clinging to the Latin liturgy. Father Wathen said there are other priests who secretly believe in the old liturgy, but they are too cowardly to say it or take a stand on it publicly.

Archbishop Sheehan said Latin liturgies approved by the Pope are permitted in Omaha as long as permission is given by the archdiocese.

'A lot of people may like the Latin liturgy better than the new liturgy,' Archbishop Sheehan said. 'But taste is not the strongest criterion. If you counted noses you would find out what most Catholics would prefer.'

New Zealand Premier Is On Visit To Britain

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Robert Muldoon of New Zealand got a traditional Maori welcome on arrival at London's Heathrow Airport on Sunday for his first state visit to Britain.

The 14 members of the London Maori Club — wearing traditional dress of grass skirts and multicolored tunics, headbands and sashes — sang and chanted greetings as Muldoon and his wife walked into an airport conference room. The Maoris are a Polynesian people native to New Zealand.

Muldoon will be here for six days and will hold trade talks with top government officials, including Prime Minister James Callaghan.

'Airport 1977' Coming

Hollywood (UPI) — Universal will produce "Airport 1977," second sequel to its highly successful "Airport," released six years ago.

Aboard M/V Odessa — Just after dawn the anchor splashed into the turquoise Mexican water. Before us was the island of Cozumel. Sun struck, drowsing in the still morning. Its untouched Maya temple ruins hold mysteries unknown.

An early morning couple leaned on the rail and the woman said: "If we go ashore I wonder where we can get lunch?"

"Now don't worry, Mother," he said. "In a town like this, there must be a Taco Bell somewhere."

We are sailing aboard the Russian cruise ship M/V Odessa. One year old. Designed by a Dane — the dining room recess for smorgasbord is now filled with flowering plants.

She was built in England — which accounts for the British hardware. The British telephones. The sophisticated computers that run ships these seagoing days.

The Odessa has been sailing from New Orleans every week since December. Saturday night out to Cozumel, to British Honduras, to the private island of Roatan. Saturday morning she's back in the Mississippi.

The Odessa carries 500 passengers. There's a crew of 250. Only a handful has an English word or two. "Vodka vairee goot," said the barman (That exhausted his say.)

The Russians are practical people. Instead of worrying whether they can understand you, they have a daily class in Russian. Let the passengers learn to understand them.

"The word for tea is 'tjaj,'" said the instructor. "Repeat please."

"Tjaj," said the passenger ladies seated in the lounge. "Isn't this fun?" they asked each other. "I can't wait to get back home and talk Russian to the women's club."

("Tjaj for two and two for tjaj, dum, de, dum, dum ...")

The Odessa — gleaming white, a gold hammer and sickle on a red stack — has all the equipment of the modern cruise ship:

Lounges. Bars. A swimming pool — small but splashy. There's a small roomful of slot machines.

The age group is lower than most cruises. Plenty of regular cruisers with a lot of mileage on them. But there are a lot of people in their thirties. Some younger.

A cruise man thinks: "It's the one week — Saturday to Saturday. That's about all the time the 30-year-olds can take from office and children."

There's a price advantage. Most cruise ships are running $100 a day or better. Odessa's bottom price is just under $50 a day. The top price, in a deluxe suite for seven days, is $695.

To make this price there's some frill cutting. There is a set menu. The cruise man said: "As soon as you put in a menu with a choice of three or four entrees, you add $20 a day to the cost."

The Odessa doesn't print menus. They are mimeographed. The menu is not for choices. It simply tells you what's coming. Ready or not. Bar prices are good but curious. Scotch is 50 cents. Add soda to it and it becomes 85. Vodka is cheap until you add tomato juice. The juice is almost as much as the vodka.

"Spasibo," said the teacher. "Spa-see-bo. It means thank you." That's an easy one. We think up ways we can thank each other.

"Would you pass me the sugar for my tjaj? Spasibo."

"You first." "No, you first."

"Spasibo." "Spasibo."

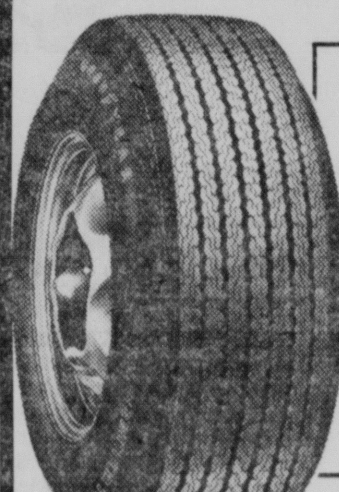

And so we sailed into the sunset.

The Spending Question

In a traditional session-end speech to the Legislature last Friday, Gov. Jim Exon drew an interesting picture of the growth of state spending during the past decade.

In fiscal 1967-68, the governor noted, the state general fund budget reached $107.4 million, the first time in 100 years that the budget climbed above one hundred million dollars. Exon continued: "Our budget for 1976-77, only nine years later, is $450 million. The budget has grown in nine years over four times the size it did in the first 100 years... the general fund operating budget of the university alone next year will exceed what was required for all of state government only nine years ago (fiscal 1966-67)... the average annual increase in the state budget over the last nine year period is approximately seventeen and one-quarter percent, which was also the amount of increase I proposed to you for next year and which you exceeded this past week... if we continue at this rate the state general fund budget would reach $1 billion by the end of the term of the next governor... well before the end of the century, in 1996, the budget would reach $10 billion."

Exon told lawmakers he wanted them to consider these questions: "Will ever-increasing taxes become customary to fund ever-greater spending increases? Should we not give at least as much attention to holding the line (or cutting taxes) as we give to devising new ways to spend more money?"

Admittedly, put the governor's way, the projected increase in the state general fund budget from about $100 million to $10 billion in the time period he used is a real shocker. But such statistical examples are meant to shock. They really don't mean that much else.

Statistics should not rule the decision-making process. We have always objected to the approach in which budgetmakers determine a politically acceptable maximum figure first and then work back from it to meet whatever needs can be met within that figure. Where the people get short-changed, whether they realize it or not, is in the determining of what is politically acceptable.

Despite the superficially alarming percentage increases, Nebraskans can't accuse their elected officials of being wild spenders. The tension between the legislative and executive branches and the recognition by the governor and lawmakers of the basically conservative nature of their constituents has kept state government here operating at a modest level. We are not overserved and overtaxed. Since the time the dual tax system was implemented, the state sales tax has crept up a half point and the state income tax has bounced around — due in the main to shenanigans by the State Board of Equalization — between 10% and 15%; it was at 15% at one point in Exon's first term and has returned to that level. The tax rate increases have not been on a radically sharp upward curve.

Nebraskans apparently want to build a better university system, for example, or provide for property tax relief and exemptions for several classes of citizens and they want a decent level of services. In our opinion the governor and the Legislature in recent years have done a reasonable job of meeting those desires without running away with their spending authority.

The question that should be pondered does not really relate to a specific dollar amount budget increase or a 15% or 10% or 12% income tax rate. The question is whether or not the quality of the services provided is worth the tax sacrifice. That is what the Legislature and the governor should be concerned with.

Trapped By Time

Under the present restrictions, we see little hope that the Legislature will ever solve the problem of failing to get its work done.

As the session ended last week, Lincoln Sen. Roland Luedtke said he would run for speaker next year, and as did retiring Speaker Jules Burbach, would use a daily agenda to keep the Unicameral moving. But he said he would like to see the agenda used "even more effectively. There is no reason to have 150 bills left on general file" at the end of a session.

Likewise, Lincoln Sen. Shirley Marsh claimed too much time was wasted at the beginning of each session. Senators should be quicker to get down to business, she said.

Discipline is a big problem for the Legislature, but in trying to keep to a schedule, it can't forget it is a deliberative body, a sounding board, a debating society.

Legislative bodies were not meant to be well-oiled machines functioning with one mind and one goal; to get to the end as quickly as possible. The diversity of the electorate and the number and complexity of issues demanding attention do not allow for a doubletime march through the agenda. Only Soviet parliaments can get away with finishing on time.

Nebraska lawmakers might do a better job of tending to business. But they are just as much trapped by the time limit on sessions as they are by lack of discipline.

The answer is not in refusing to introduce bills (that might look good for a senator once in awhile, but as a general rule it is an abdication of responsibility) or cutting back on debate too far or hurrying through the agenda just for the sake of hurrying. The answer is in seeking public approval of knocking down the time limits on sessions.

ON TARGET

By DON WALTON

After 40 days of circling the issues, the 1976 Legislature did its job in the last 20 days.

When it went home Friday, most of its major work had been completed.

More could have been accomplished if the first two-thirds of the session had not wandered so aimlessly and so repetitively among peripheral issues, leaving all that really mattered for another day.

But legislatures are probably not meant to be efficient operations which make the best use of their time. They are, in Nebraska, a gathering of 49 independent people with their own priorities and their own wishes.

Power is amazingly diffused in the non-partisan Nebraska unicameral system. With few exceptions, each senator shares roughly one-fifth of the power. That kind of body is not easily controlled — so if it chooses to wander, it will wander.

With time running out, senators finally dug into the pile of unfinished business, completed their appropriations duties (including a review of gubernatorial vetoes... and enacted or killed most of their priority bills.

You would never call it a session of historic accomplishments — but in the end, it did stamp itself as a responsible Legislature, willing to put in the long hours required to wrap up most of its priority work in the final four weeks.

In its last days, it even turned a little gutty — putting what it considered to be the needs of the University of Nebraska ahead of the politically tempting prospect of a state income tax cut.

Anyway, it's gone — and the next session in 1977 is likely to be very much a new Legislature.

There will be some new faces after next November's elections. The departure of Speaker Jules Burbach signals the approach of new leadership — although Gene Mahoney is likely to be back as chairman of the Legislative Council executive board.

There may be a wholesale shakeup in the Appropriations Committee. Dirk Marvel may abandon the chairmanship to run for speaker. Some other committee members appear anxious to jump ship.

RALPH DE TOLEDANO

WASHINGTON — Recently I received a letter that had been mailed to me from California a year ago. Another, and important, letter I had sent to an associate reached him three months later. Many people have had the same experience.

From time to time I am sent registered mail. The post office won't deliver it to my door because — as it tells me — I live on the sixth floor and it is against the rules to take a letter beyond the fifth floor, though there is an elevator in my building.

The postman leaves me a notice instead.

When I appear at the registered letter window, my letter usually cannot be found and I must return the following day. After a wait that can last up to half an hour, I get my mail. While I stand there, a host of postal employees enjoys an endless bull session.

Meanwhile, back on Capitol Hill, the postal unions are weeping copious tears about the plight of their members. (The postal unions have one of the most powerful lobbies in Washington, and usually what they want, they get.)

I pick up a copy of Time magazine, and the publisher, Andrew Heiskell, is complaining because the U.S. Postal Service is raising second-class mailing rates for magazines and newspapers, thereby contravening the expressed intentions of the Founding Fathers to make the printed word available to the citizenry at non-prohibitive prices.

Someone more cynical than myself might point out that Time has never been the bearer of bad news about government employee unions which more subtly dig into my pocket and yours. But Heiskell makes some very good points. He cites facts and figures which should make us view with alarm, however complacent Congress may be.

For example, the basic wage of postal workers is $13,400 a year. As against this, the average national police salary is $11,800. The national average salary for teachers is $11,800 and for assistant professors in four-year colleges $11,600.

A policeman risks his life every day to protect us — and a teacher spends years getting the necessary education to teach Johnny what Johnny is taught today. In some post offices, it is no longer required that a mail handler be able to read.

There are, let me hasten to add, many postal workers who work hard and efficiently to make the wheels turn. But there are also others who have the conviction that they have fulfilled their duties by being physically present and breathing.

From time to time groups of citizens decide that they can get the mail delivered cheaper and more efficiently. But the moment they begin to set up their own private mail service, the USPS and the Justice Department descend on them feet first — and they learn the hard way that it is illegal to deliver your own mail.

The post office, you see, is a government monopoly which considers the private delivery of mail a kind of hijacking.

In many countries, telephone service is a government monopoly — and there are some here who would like to put the Bell System out of business and turn the whole thing over to the Washington bureaucrats. If you have ever made phone calls in Paris or Moscow, you will realize what this would mean. (In Moscow, telephone directories are classified documents, and if you don't have someone's phone number, just forget it.)

If the postal service were to be turned over to a private company which could lose its franchise if it didn't deliver, the mails would be handled efficiently. Not only that, but the federal government — instead of being compelled to pour billions of dollars into the Postal Service to keep it from collapsing — would pick up a few dollars in taxes, a pleasant experience at a time when the budget deficit is pushing $70 billion.

No one, of course, expects the federal government to be hit by a thunderclap of sanity at this time. But certainly the salaries being paid to postal workers should stir up some concern in the citizenry — particularly when, not satisfied with a base pay of $13,400, they are demanding a new pay increase which will inevitably force up postage rates again.

Bob Hope said of the last rate increase that 10 cents would go for postage and three cents for storage. He had a point, but no one laughed.

Lessening Regard For Human Life

WASHINGTON — The State of New Jersey has now decided to let Karen Ann Quinlan's parents terminate her life support if doctors agree. Public support for the death penalty is growing. New Yorkers are flocking to see "Snuff," a movie purporting to show the killing and dismemberment of a young girl.

Does this mean that the American people are losing their reverence for human life — that "inalienable right" saluted 200 years ago in the Declaration of Independence? Polls and other surveys suggest, unhappily, that it does indeed.

Of course, nobody has yet polled a cross-section of Americans and asked: Are you and your neighbors less concerned about human life than you were ten years ago? The surveys in question are indirect: They deal with euthanasia, capital punishment, suicide, abortion and life support. But taken together, they add up to a portrait of a population losing some of its respect for human life. Here are the key trends:

EUTHANASIA: Back in 1950, the Gallup Poll found only 36% of Americans agreeing that doctors should have the power to end the life of a patient suffering from an incurable disease even if both the patient and his family so requested. By 1973, Gallup found 53% saying that the doctor should be allowed to end the patient's life.

Newer polls yield even stronger support for mercy killing. In early 1975, California pollster Mervyn Field asked a cross-section of that state's people: "Should an incurably ill patient have the right to refuse medication that may prolong his or her life?" Eighty-seven per cent said yes, while only 10% said no. When the question was changed to "Should an incurably ill patient have the right to ask for and get medication that would painlessly end his or her life?" 63% said yes. Among persons 18 to 34 years old, 73% agreed. And in late 1975, NBC News asked a national sample: "Do you think doctors should use mechanical means to prolong a person's life if there is no chance for that person to recover?" Only 16% said yes while 72% said no.

ABORTION: In 1972, according to the Harris Poll, only 42% of Americans favored legalizing abortion during the first three months of pregnancy. By 1973, after the Supreme Court so held, 52% agreed. By 1975, 54% supported allowing abortion during the first trimester.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT: The Supreme Court is reconsidering death penalty arguments, and so are the American people. The Gallup Poll found that 64% of our citizens supported the death penalty in 1974, up from just 47% back in 1957.

SUICIDE: Writing in the April, 1976, issue of Psychology Today, co-author Paul Cameron describes surveying all articles on suicide indexed over the past 50 years in the Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature. Death, once portrayed as a brutal waste, now generally appears in a more neutral light, and "some recent articles even present suicide as a good thing to do and are written in a manner that might encourage the reader to take his own life under certain circumstances." In 1975, a majority of Americans under 30 told Gallup Poll interviewers that incurable disease or even continual pain confer a person with the moral right to end his life. Changing opinions on euthanasia and changing opinions on suicide must go hand in hand. And they do.

VIOLENT DEATH: If anybody can point to a poll showing public approval of killing, I haven't seen it. But if we accept movie box office receipts or television ratings as quasi-survey evidence, the trend is frightening. In New York, the movie "Snuff" — which purports to show a young girl being killed and dismembered — is packing them in; one TV network has just shown a two-part evening movie based on the Charles Manson murders; Evel Knievel keeps escalating his violent stunts; and promoters are now arranging a "Jaws" inspired duel to the death between a man and a shark for U.S. closed-circuit television audiences.

Until the Industrial Revolution of the late 18th and 19th Centuries, even civilized Westerners took life cheaply. Not only was slavery legal, but London's Tyburn Tree dangled men hung for stealing a purse. Then, as daily life became easier, respect for life grew. From Florence Nightingale to Albert Schweitzer, the 19th and 20th Centuries honored people who devoted themselves to saving lives hitherto regarded as cheap. Now, in the age of wrap-around technology and communications, that respect seems to be ebbing.

Cans That Go Phhht In The Dawn

NEW YORK — Ever since the day last year when I sprayed my hair with Windex, I have been worried about aerosols. So has my husband, after he mistakenly lathered his chin with furniture polish. (The can said it was not necessary to rub, but Art disputes this.)

These incidents, and an assortment of others which involved picking up the wrong spray by the dawn's foggy light, inspired the family doublet: Glasses make asses of folks without glasses.

It would be comforting and self-serving to be able to state that our fear of aerosols is based on the recently conceived theory that such dispensers may endanger the earth's ozone layer. But it wouldn't be precisely true. Like most of our friends, we find it difficult to imagine that our occasional squirts — at our hairdos, our chins, our ovens and our cockroaches — actually add up to environmental catastrophe. Not when federal authorities authorize flights of the supersonic transports which, in one blasted blast of discharge, probably send out more contamination than all the consumer products in the world whiffing away simultaneously at the same moment.

Still, according to the manufacturers of aerosol concoctions, American consumers are cutting back somewhat on their purchases of cans that go phhht, because of the current debate on their consequences to the ozone layer which shields the earth from harmful (skin-cancer causing) sun rays. The manufacturers are converting, in some cases, to other types of propellants than the fluorocarbons which scientists theorize may be damaging the upper atmosphere.

"The aerosol can has been a trusted, reliable servant to man since the 1940's when it was first put to widespread use dispensing insecticides to protect U.S. troops from malaria-carrying insects in the South Pacific," says one such manufacturer (Johnson Wax), "and for 25 years aerosols grew in popularity, becoming a symbol to the American consumer of the ease and convenience of modern technology." But recently these symbols have caused confusion, misunderstanding and anxiety among buyers because of the scientific dispute... and big business responds to anxiety, which can cut profits.

Johnson, one of the companies which has converted from controversial fluorocarbons to alternatives like hydrocarbons and carbon dioxide, labels most of its products reassuringly: Use With Confidence. Contains No Fluorocarbons. The company also has just issued a free pamphlet, Questions and Answers on Aerosols, in the hope of clearing the air so buyers will leap fearlessly back into the marketplace for pushbutton products.

You might ask (as I did) whether the new "alternate" propellants are as good as the old, potentially dangerous fluorocarbon, and the answer would be yes-and-no. It seems that carbon dioxide is not a very efficient aerosol propellant for some products because, as the product level drops inside the can, the carbon dioxide pressure also drops, reducing the effectiveness of the spray. As for the other alternate, hydrocarbons, they are flammable — although when combined with many household products' formulas, the flammability is "significantly reduced." Follow directions for the use and storage of such aerosol containers, then makers recommend, because "the aerosol — like the automobile or even the simple stepladder — can be dangerous if improperly used. For example, an aerosol can could explode if carelessly placed on a hot kitchen stove." Nothing's perfect.

Fluorocarbons are still used by many manufacturers of spray items ranging from hair sprays to personal deodorants. Some simply cannot be converted to carbon dioxide or hydrocarbon propellants. Are they really destructive to the ozone layer?

That is the $100 million question to which non scientists have yet offered a conclusive answer — and no fluorocarbon producer can, either. (Fluorocarbons, incidentally, are man-made chemicals marketed under such trade names as Freon, Genetron, Ucon and Isotron.)

But everyone is agreed that aerosol cans are here to stay, because if one propellant is unsatisfactory, another will be found to take its place.

That fact is as clear as the insect-repellent on your face!

The Spending Question

In a traditional session-end speech to the Legislature last Friday, Gov. Jim Exon drew an interesting picture of the growth of state spending during the past decade.

In fiscal 1967-68, the governor noted, the state general fund budget reached $107.4 million, the first time in 100 years that the budget climbed above one hundred million dollars. Exon continued: "Our budget for 1976-77, only nine years later, is $450 million. The budget has grown in nine years over four times the size it did in the first 100 years... the general fund operating budget of the university alone next year will exceed what was required for all of state government only nine years ago (fiscal 1966-67)... the average annual increase in the state budget over the last nine year period is approximately seven-tenths and one-quarter percent, which was also the amount of increase I proposed to you for next year and which you exceeded this past week... if we continue at this rate the state general fund budget would reach $1 billion by the end of the term of the next governor... well before the end of the century, in 1996, the budget would reach $10 billion."

Exon told lawmakers he wanted them to consider these questions: "Will ever-increasing taxes become customary to fund ever-greater spending increases? Should we not give at least as much attention to holding the line (or cutting taxes) as we give to devising new ways to spend more money?"

Admittedly, put the governor's way, the projected increase in the state general fund budget from about $100 million to $10 billion in the time period he used is a real shocker. But such statistical examples are meant to shock. They really don't mean that much else.

Statistics should not rule the decision-making process. We have always objected to the approach in which budgetmakers determine a politically acceptable maximum figure first and then work back from it to meet whatever needs can be met within that figure. Where the people get short-changed, whether they realize it or not, is in the determining of what is politically acceptable.

Despite the superficially alarming percentage increases, Nebraskans can't accuse their elected officials of being wild spenders. The tension between the legislative and executive branches and the recognition by the governor and lawmakers of the basically conservative nature of their constituents has kept state government here operating at a modest level. We are not overserved and overtaxed. Since the time the dual tax system was implemented, the state sales tax has crept up a half point and the state income tax has bounced around — due in the main to shenanigans by the State Board of Equalization — between 10% and 15%; it was at 15% at one point in Exon's first term and has returned to that level. The tax rate increases have not been on a radically sharp upward curve.

Nebraskans apparently want to build a better university system, for example, or provide for property tax relief and exemptions for several classes of citizens and they want a decent level of services. In our opinion the governor and the Legislature in recent years have done a reasonable job of meeting those desires without running away with their spending authority.

The question that should be pondered does not really relate to a specific dollar amount budget increase or a 15% or 10% or 12% income tax rate. The question is whether or not the quality of the services provided is worth the tax sacrifice. That is what the Legislature and the governor should be concerned with.

Trapped By Time

Under the present restrictions, we see little hope that the Legislature will ever solve the problem of failing to get its work done.

As the session ended last week, Lincoln Sen. Roland Luedtke said he would run for speaker next year, and as did retiring Speaker Jules Burbach, would use a daily agenda to keep the Unicameral moving. But he said he would like to see the agenda used "even more effectively. There is no reason to have 150 bills left on general file" at the end of a session.

Likewise, Lincoln Sen. Shirley Marsh claimed too much time was wasted at the beginning of each session. Senators should be quicker to get down to business, she said.

Discipline is a big problem for the Legislature, but in trying to keep to a schedule, it can't forget it is a deliberative body, a sounding board, a debating society.

Legislative bodies were not meant to be well-oiled machines functioning with one mind and one goal: to get to the end as quickly as possible. The diversity of the electorate and the number and complexity of issues demanding attention do not allow for a doubletime march through the agenda. Only Soviet parliaments can get away with finishing on time.

Nebraska lawmakers might do a better job of tending to business. But they are just as much trapped by the time limit on sessions as they are by lack of discipline.

The answer is not in refusing to introduce bills (that might look good for a senator once in awhile, but as a general rule it is an abdication of responsibility) or cutting back on debate too far or hurrying through the agenda just for the sake of hurrying. The answer is in seeking public approval of knocking down the time limits on sessions.

By DON WALTON

After 40 days of circling the issues, the 1976 Legislature did its job in the last 20 days.

When it went home Friday, most of its major work had been completed.

More could have been accomplished if the first two-thirds of the session had not wandered so aimlessly and so repetitively among peripheral issues, leaving all that really mattered for another day.

But legislatures are probably not meant to be efficient operations which make the best use of their time. They are, in Nebraska, a gathering of 49 independent people with their own priorities and their own wishes.

Power is amazingly diffused in the non-partisan Nebraska unicameral system. With few exceptions, each senator shares roughly one-fifth of the power. That kind of body is not easily controlled — so if it chooses to wander, it will wander.

With time running out, senators finally dug into the pile of unfinished business, completed their appropriations duties (including a review of gubernatorial vetoes) and enacted or killed most of their priority bills.

You would never call it a session of historic accomplishments — but, in the end, it did stamp itself as a responsible Legislature, willing to put in the long hours required to wrap up most of its priority work in the final four weeks.

In its last days, it even turned a little gutty — putting what it considered to be the needs of the University of Nebraska ahead of the politically tempting prospect of a state income tax cut.

Anyway, it's gone — and the next session in 1977 is likely to be very much a new Legislature.

There will be some new faces after next November's elections. The departure of Speaker Jules Burbach signals the approach of new leadership — although Gene Mahoney is likely to be back as chairman of the Legislative Council executive board.

There may be a wholesale shakeup in the Appropriations Committee. Dick Marvel may abandon the chairmanship to run for speaker. Some other committee members appear anxious to jump ship.

One of the latter, Harold Simpson, is seeking election to the Public Service Commission. He's at mid-term, and should he fail, he is likely to be a strong candidate for speaker himself.

Meanwhile, within the legislative body, the sands of individual influence are shifting — as they always do.

The leader on one issue is the follower on the next. And the coalition which formed to shove a bill to enactment or bury it immediately dissolves when the next issue appears, and another quite different combination becomes to take shape.

Some senators had a particularly good session. One of them would be Loran Schmit, whose performance in guiding the medical malpractice bill to enactment was impressive.

Another might be Frank Lewis, who knows how to get things done in the Unicameral. Mahoney's influence has probably never been greater.

There will be more shifting in 1977.

Hey, c'mon.

You guys at the Omaha Press Club ought to withdraw your application for property tax exemption in Douglas County.

You are neither religious, charitable nor educational, and shouldn't have received the exemption from your county board — which, of course, the Omaha press covers in great detail.

The fact is: You never should have even asked for a tax exemption.

The press can be mighty pious and pure when it deals with other people's affairs, raising questions about conflict of interest and special interest influence.

But, too often, it seems to apply other standards to its own activities.

Which reminds me: When the Statehouse press is moved from a hallway to office space on the Capitol's first floor after state government's movement to its new office building, the state should charge rental to news organizations which share the space.

The press would raise the dickens if any other private enterprise were given free office space in the Capitol.

That is the $100 million question to which non scientists have yet offered a conclusive answer — and no fluorocarbon producer can, either. (Fluorocarbons, incidentally, are man-made chemicals marketed under such trade names as Freon, Genetron, Ucon and Isotron.)

But everyone is agreed that aerosol cans are here to stay, because if one propellant is unsatisfactory, another will be found to take its place.

That fact is as clear as the insect-repellent on your face!

3 Hijackers Take Off In Long Range DC8 Jet

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Three Filipino Moslems holding 10 hostages flew out of Bangkok aboard a Philippine Airlines DC8 jet Monday morning, and officials said they were headed for a stopover in Karachi en route to Libya.

Thai officials said the jet took off at 10:41 a.m. and that the flight to Karachi would take three hours, 50 minutes.

The gunmen, using their hostages as shields, walked across about 500 yards of runway from the short-range BAC111 jet to the waiting long-range DC8. Armed Thai police reportedly stood by about 80 yards from each of the two aircraft. Newsmen were forbidden to go near the transfer point for security reasons.

The officials said the hijackers then released 10 of the hostages seized when they took over the plane Wednesday. They kept only the chief pilot of the BAC111 and the vice president of Philippine Airlines (PAL), along with eight crew members of the DC8 which had flown in Sunday night from Manila at the demand of the hijackers.

The take-off ended 71 hours of negotiations, waiting and unsuccessful stalling tactics at the airport here.

Philippine Ambassador Manuel T. Yan told newsmen he understood Karachi officials would let the DC8 land and that there was no flight plan beyond that.

Yan said that Libya, where the hijackers insisted on being flown, had given no assurances of a haven.

Yan told newsmen Sunday night that the gunmen had pulled pins on two grenades to demonstrate their seriousness before the PAL DC8 was flown in for them.

He had said earlier that the DC8 would stop in Calcutta to refuel after leaving Bangkok.

The hijackers had seized the BAC111 during a flight over the southern Philippines. They claimed they were Moslem members of the Moro Liberation Front.

Yan said his government had "guaranteed" to Thailand that the DC8 would take off Sunday night with the hijackers, but airport authorities later said it probably would not take off until Monday morning.

The gunmen, who claim to be Moslem members of the Moro Liberation Front active in the Philippines, hijacked a twin-engine BAC111 Wednesday over the southern Philippines. The hijacked plane, with 12 hostages and the gunmen still aboard, was parked about 800 yards from the airport terminal when the DC8 landed.

Yan said the hijackers had agreed to release 10 of their 12 hostages, surrender all but one of their weapons and transfer to the DC8 for the trip to the Mideast.

After commandeering the BAC111, the gunmen first ordered it to Manila where they exchanged the 72 passengers for PAL employees. They took off Friday for the Mideast but landed in Bangkok to refuel the short-range jet.

Airline officials here said this hijacking had lasted longer than any other in air history. A 1973 hijacking of a Japan Airlines plane that was finally blown up in Dubai lasted four days.

Patty Wanted To Cop A Plea After Arrest

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Transcripts of pretrial interviews with Patricia Hearst, the kidnapped heiress convicted of bank robbery, indicate she had doubts about the brainwashing defense planned by her attorneys, The Los Angeles Times said Sunday.

Miss Hearst, who is to be sentenced on her armed bank robbery conviction Monday, suggested "plea bargaining" not long after her Sept. 18 arrest, according to excerpts of the transcripts published in Times' Sunday editions.

Plea bargaining refers to negotiations between prosecutors and defense attorneys in which a defendant agrees to plead guilty to a lesser charge, rather than taking the case to trial.

The Times account said a University of California at Los Angeles psychiatrist, Louis J. West, played a major role in developing the defense strategy used by attorneys F. Lee Bailey and Albert Johnson.

West was one of the psychiatrists ordered by U.S. District Judge Oliver J. Carter to examine Miss Hearst to determine her competence to stand trial.

Before the trial began, West prepared a 135-page report which dealt not only with competence but with long explanations of Miss Hearst's behavior during her months as a fugitive, the Times said.

West conferred with Bailey and Johnson on Oct. 4 on their strategy, telling Miss Hearst later it "was the only one I ever saw."

"Which is?" the transcript shows her asking.

"Which is to emphasize the involuntary and violent way in which you were dragged out of a relatively normal life. The forcibly and terrorizing sort of indoctrination that you got and the tremendous pressure of threats in the beginning to make you sort of subservient and compliant with the leadership of this group . . .

"I think myself that's the best explanation for what happened. I haven't heard anything else to make me think otherwise. Does that sound logical to you?" West asked.

Miss Hearst did not respond verbally, and West added: "You have some problems with it, though."

"Yes, uh . . . (it) just doesn't get rid of everything," she said, then paused and sighed.

West contacted Miss Hearst's parents between the time of her kidnap and arrest, expressing sympathy. He was the first defense witness and stayed in court during the entire trial. He occasionally visited the family outside of court.

The Times also said Miss Hearst was interviewed by Dr. Margaret Thaler Singer, a clinical psychologist, about a period shortly after Miss Hearst's arrest.

"I talked to my lawyers . . . about a defense," Miss Hearst said, " . . . I sort of . . . said something about, well, maybe plea bargaining, and then I got into, that, uh, I didn't care very much."

After her sentencing in San Francisco, Miss Hearst will be brought to Los Angeles where she and William and Emily Harris are charged with a variety of state counts stemming from a May 1974 crime spree. A hearing in that case is scheduled for Wednesday.

N. Dakota City Fights Flood

MINOT, N.D. (AP) — Hundreds of volunteers, bolstered by National Guard troops, continued their around-the-clock efforts Sunday in an attempt to hold back the predicted record rises in the Souris River.

More than 12,000 persons, about one-third of Minot's population, packed clothes, furniture and other personal belongings into anything with wheels in an attempt to meet Thursday's evacuation deadline.

"We know it's coming, and this is just the period of waiting," said Mayor Chester Reiten. "I'm still reasonably confident we can hold the water in the dikes."

The flood would be the fourth to hit the city in the last seven years, and the residents have been through the trials of moving in past years. The Souris winds through Minot, which is nestled between two hills.

"This is it for me," said one resident as he surveyed the river lapping at the dikes. "I'm going to move up the hill. I don't want to, but I'm going to."

However, many of the citizens forced to leave their homes are going about their work with quiet resignation.

"You probably think we're all pretty stupid staying down here year after year," said Jim Larson as he packed a truck with furniture. "But I was born and raised down here and once you've been living among the big old trees and everything, it's awfully hard to leave."

All families must be out of the flood plain by Thursday, several days before the predicted crest of the river. Most are moving in with friends or relatives, or going to motels and homes volunteered by their owners. Some are temporarily billeted in local gymnasiums.

By Wednesday, police will make a sweep of the area and seal it off against possible looting.

The National Weather Service predicted Sunday the Souris would crest in Minot on April 18, one day earlier than previously forecast.

Meanwhile, heavy equipment weaves through Minot, hauling dirt to the river and dumping it on dikes.

Some of the dikes were already 25 feet high, and the Army Corps of Engineers said an additional 3 to 4 feet were planned.

Hustler Turns Social Worker

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — William Henry Burgess decided he'd rather help elderly people than be a pool hustler.

After all, he was 80 years old. He says, "I was hustlin'. Then, a couple of years ago, a . . . lady got me this job."

The job is with the Senior Citizens Friendship Corps, a city-funded agency that works in the city's Germantown section. Burgess, now 84, is paid $5,048 a year and is reportedly the city's oldest employee.

Twice widowed and childless, Burgess likes his job and the contact it gives him with people. "Wherever I go, they like me," he says.

Burgess visits elderly shut-ins, helping them shop, clean house, and often just keeping them company.

"What do I talk about? It all depends on what kind of life they've lived," he says.

One of the people Burgess visits is Anne Butler, a widow who lives alone in a three-bedroom house.

"Frankly, I wanted a woman," she says. "But he's such a nice man and very bright."

Each Monday, Burgess receives a schedule for the week, giving him the names and addresses of the people he has to see

Sometimes he has trouble sticking to the schedule because he uses the city's public transportation system, not always reliable, he says.

"I'll always be young," claims Burgess. He says the job has helped keep him thinking of the future instead of the past.

Still, his mind often drifts back over the years, recalling the days when he was a prize fighter. He eventually turned to "hustling" in the 1920s and proudly recalls "I was a darn good hustler."

His only regret? That he never finished high school. "And I'd have gone to college. If I had the chance, and have become a lawyer."

Singer, Bands Spark Exhibition

Faith, flag and freedom, a Bicentennial salute by the Catholics of Southeast Nebraska attracted a nationally known television entertainer, bands, exhibitors and thousands of people to Pershing Auditorium Sunday.

Grand Island native Joe Feeney, the Irish tenor of Lawrence Welk show fame, gave a brief concert and later sang an Ave Maria in Latin as part of the Mass of Thanksgiving which highlighted the days activities.

Nebraska football players spoke and signed autographs, the Scarlet and Cream singers from UNL performed; high school bands from Sacred Heart in Falls City; Saint Cecelia in Hastings and Lourdes in Nebraska City gave a concert; school children participated in old fashioned spelling bees; Czech and Vietnamese groups sang, polka bands and old time fiddlers played.

A variety of display areas in the basement of Pershing gave a carnival atmosphere to the festival. Booths showed a variety of public services provided by and for Catholics.

A square dance and a polka dance rounded out the evening activities. Former Governor and Mrs. Robert Crosby hosted a dinner party for Feeney and his wife and about 170 guests. Feeney's brother, Father John Feeney, was a surprise visitor from Wisconsin and both men spoke at the banquet.

A mass was celebrated by Bishop Glemon P. Flavin and a group of musicians and singers from Minnesota led the audience in singing hymns with polka music accompaniment.

Miami Hotel Blaze Toll 9

MIAMI (AP) — Two more people have died from burns suffered in a fire that gutted an old, wood-frame hotel in downtown Miami a week ago, bringing the death toll to nine.

Fire Chief Don Hickman said Saturday that authorities are convinced the blaze at the Avondale Hotel was deliberately set. "We feel very firmly that it was arson," Hickman said. "We feel somebody went in and set it."

The investigation has narrowed to two suspects, the chief said, but neither he nor police would elaborate. All week long officials have been giving lie detector tests and questioning a number of people, but no charges have been lodged.

Terry Moore Says Hughes Married Her

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Former movie starlet Terry Moore, 47, claims to have been married to the late billionaire Howard Hughes and says there "may have been" children by the marriage.

"Howard was the greatest lover I ever had," she said. "He was the best."

Hughes, who died last Monday from kidney failure, had only two known wives. He was divorced from Houston socialite Ella Rice in 1929. No other marriage was recorded for Hughes until he married actress Jean Peters in 1957. They were divorced in 1971.

Miss Moore said she met Hughes when she was 15 and married him in the late 1940s. She would not say how she met him.

"I have lost the greatest friend I have ever had," Miss Moore said in an interview in Fort Lauderdale. "Howard raised me."

Don't Follow Path Of Force Is Pope's Counsel To The Young

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI, celebrating mass in St. Peter's Basilica on this Palm Sunday, called on young people not to follow the path of "force . . . and oppressive revolution."

Vatican sources said the appeal was a clear reference to a week of political violence in Italy.

The 78-year-old pontiff spoke to a crowd of 20,000, most of them young, as he led millions of Roman Catholics throughout the world in Holy Week celebrations.

In his address, Pope Paul said Jesus "places himself in the mainstream of civilization and divides it into two different and often opposed currents."

Crash Causes Power Outage At Hwys. 2, 77

A Lincoln woman complained of head injuries after a spectacular crash which severed a utility pole and blacked out the intersection of Hwys. 2 and 77 shortly before midnight Sunday.

Police said the pole came to rest on the car after impact and the car, pole and wires came to rest across the northbound lanes of traffic just south of the intersection.

Street lights and traffic signals were out for nearly an hour as a result of the crash.

Don't Follow Path Of Force Is Pope's Counsel To The Young

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI, celebrating mass in St. Peter's Basilica on this Palm Sunday, called on young people not to follow the path of "force . . . and oppressive revolution." Vatican sources said the appeal was a clear reference to a week of political violence in Italy.

The 78-year-old pontiff spoke to a crowd of 20,000, most of them young, as he led millions of Roman Catholics throughout the world in Holy Week celebrations.

In his address, Pope Paul said Jesus "places himself in the mainstream of civilization and divides it into two different and often opposed currents.

"On one side — his side, that of Jesus Christ — there is the current of peace and universal brotherhood among those who are his followers. On the other is the stream of violence, division and conflict, and in the end, that of war.

"On one side, the current of those who are poor of spirit, of those who are seeking the kingdom of God, of those who believe in eternal life; on the other, the current of those who are selfish and who seek an earthly kingdom, those whose trust is in time alone . . . that make force and aggressive and oppressive revolution the blind reason for the destinies of peoples."

On Wednesday, leftists launched a fire bomb attack on the Justice Ministry, and police shot and killed one of the raiders. On Thursday, extremists launched another fire bomb attack on the headquarters of the ruling Christian Democratic party. Saboteurs and arsonists also destroyed industrial and commercial property across the country.

Before the mass the Pope blessed the palms and olive branches on the threshold of the large basilica. The pontiff carried an olive branch himself as a sign of humility instead of the elaborate palm he had carried in previous years. He walked the 20 yards from the threshold to a point inside the basilica where he was taken in his portable throne to the altar.

After the mass the Pope went to the window of his studio overlooking St. Peter's Square and again addressed and blessed the crowd.

With Sunday's ceremony the Pope started a busy week of activities. On Holy Thursday he will celebrate the Last Supper Mass at the St. John Lateran Basilica and will wash the feet of 12 persons, a ceremony recalling Jesus' washing the feet of the Apostles. Usually the persons chosen are either poor, or young student priests.

On Holy Friday the Pope will participate in a night procession through the scenic ruins of the Colosseum.

On Holy Saturday the Pope will attend a vigil in St. Peter's Basilica.

The heavy papal schedule of activities will climax on Easter when the pontiff will celebrate a mass in St. Peter's Basilica.

Ag Group Honors Dr. Helms

Fifty-two University of Nebraska-Lincoln students were initiated into Alpha Zeta, the undergraduate agricultural honorary, at the chapter's annual banquet here Sunday.

The newly inducted members were recognized along with Dr. Thomas J. Helms, who was named an honorary member.

Helms is assistant director of resident instruction in the agriculture college and assistant professor of entomology at NU. He also is a fellow of the centennial education program, has served as advisor to the Agriculture Advisory Board and received the Outstanding Professor Award in the College of Agriculture in 1972.

Also honored at the banquet was Warren Nathan Eckloff of Minden, a sophomore agriculture honors major. He was awarded the $100 Alpha Zeta scholarship for superior scholastic achievement and activities.

This year's recipient of the Art vonBergen award went to Keith Johnson of York, who served as chancellor of Alpha Zeta for the 1975-76 year. Johnson received a scholarship cup in recognition of his achievements.

New officers for the 1976-77 year are: Robert Nielsen, Gretna, chancellor; Lowell Graves, Ainsworth, censor; Mary Sokolik, Ralston, scribe; William Siefert, Bennet, treasurer; and John Schaff, Curtis, chronicler.

Assessor Says Public Has To Pay

Omaha (UPI) — Douglas County Assessor Frank Bemis has estimated taxpayers will have to pay $85,000 to make up money lost through property exempt from taxes.

Bemis said the Douglas County Board has kept around $2.3 million worth of property which he wanted taxed off the tax rolls.

The board has held hearings on more than 100 pieces of tax-exempt property which Bemis wanted taxed. The board rejected Bemis' suggestions in 74 cases and upheld his decisions in 41 of the cases.

The amount in dispute is only a small portion of the county's total property taxes. County officials say real estate in the county is valued at $2.7 billion, with property taxes of $100 million in the current fiscal year.

Duncan Farmer Killed In Mishap

Duncan (AP) — Oscar Adkisson, 75, a rural Duncan farmer, died Saturday in a tractor mishap.

Platte County Deputy Attorney Gayle Tessenford said Adkisson was dising a field near his home when he drove under a tree that apparently knocked him off the tractor. He was dragged about 30 feet.

Tractor Tips, Kills Farmer

Nebraska City (AP) — Ernest Eugene Bohlen, 35, of rural Nebraska City was killed instantly Saturday evening when the tractor he was driving overturned and pinned him.

The Otoe County Sheriff's office says Bohlen and his son were spraying in a neighboring field when the accident occurred.

Mrs. Masters Honored For Service

Syracuse — Mr. Margaret Masters of Syracuse was recipient of the Syracuse-Dunbar-Avooca Education Community Service Award at the group's annual banquet. After having taught in the Syracuse schools, she became librarian for the schools in 1960. Mrs. Masters has written a history of Syracuse and wrote the narration for the Syracuse centennial pageant.

Feeders Twilight Tour Planned

Clatonia — Carl Stewart, head of the livestock division of Farmers Grain and Livestock Hedging Corporation of Des Moines, Iowa, will be the guest speaker at the Southeast Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association dinner following the twilight tour Tuesday. The tour will begin at 6 p.m. at the Eldean Blome farm northeast of Clatonia.

Ranchers Will Hear Whelan

Burwell — Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan will be the guest speaker at the Burwell Chamber of Commerce sponsored annual farmer-rancher banquet April 28. The event, which has been renamed chuck wagon feed, will be staged in the Burwell Legion Hall.

Pennington Accepts Kansas Post

Brule — Dr. Bud Pennington, superintendent of schools at Brule the past two years, has resigned to accept a position at Troy, Kan. Leonard Sherman, who has been principal in the Brule schools for four years, has also submitted his resignation.

Eight District Dairy Shows Set

Dates and locations for the 1976 district dairy shows in the state have been announced by Phil Cole, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension dairyman. The schedule for the shows is as follows: July 19, South Sioux City; July 21, Hemingford; July 22, North Platte; July 31, Beatrice; Aug. 3, Fremont; Aug. 6, Grand Island; Aug. 9, Norfolk; and Aug. 11, Beaver City.

Nebraskans' Charolais Wins Honors

Houston, Tex. — A Charolais bull owned by three Nebraska ranchers has earned two of the breed's highest honors, according to the American-International Charolais Association of Houston. Nutmeg's Avignon FR 31, a six-year-old bull owned by Gentry's Double Hook Ranch of Whitman, Rikli Charolais of Murdock, Mervin Zysett of Farnham, and R & V Farms of Iowa, Kan., became the national Charolais association's first roll of excellence sire of the breed.

Weekly Grain Report

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

It is becoming apparent that we are not going to export as much wheat as the U.S. Department of Agriculture had predicted. We had the lowest increase in anticipated sales of wheat for a single week this year.

The rise in wheat prices last week stems in part from an Egyptian order and from farmer resistance to lower prices.

There was some good news for soybean growers. The Common Market is still buying soybeans and soybean meal in spite of its efforts to move surplus milk powder into livestock feed channels.

Rainfall in Texas and Nebraska improved crop conditions enough to remove the incentive of speculators to buy up existing quantities of grain — but not enough to produce a crop.

Nebraska farmers in the 16-county storm area who lost power for electric irrigation wells should know by April 19 if they will get power to the wells this summer. Many may switch to grain sorghum as a safer crop in case the irrigation season promises to be delayed or entirely dry.

Normally, a single storm wouldn't affect national grain prices, but this is an important irrigated corn area involving nearly half a million acres of high-producing land. At least 10% of the land involved is unlikely to have power in time for irrigating the 1976 crop.

Russia is known to be seeking additional shipping so it can get the rest of the U.S. grain it has purchased loaded by the end of the export season. That is an indication the Russians want to import all the grain they can under their agreement with us.

250 UNO Students Work In Small Business Project

Omaha (AP) — Teams of business students from the University of Nebraska-Omaha have been sent to serve as management consultants to about 250 small companies as part of their course work.

The teams were started from UNO's participation in a cooperative program started in 1973 by the Small Business Administration and business colleges across the nation.

Under the program, firms get needed management assistance at no cost, and students can apply the business theories they learn in school, according to William Muse, UNO business dean.

The first year, UNO teams were assigned to about 50 companies. Last year and this year they went to 100. The SBA provides some funds to help cover expenses and the rest comes from the college's budget.

The students usually work with a company for a semester. They conduct a variety of studies depending on the needs of the firm, such as financial analyses, marketing surveys and reviews of cost accounting practices.

Couple Files $100,000 Suit Against State

Hastings (UPI) — A suit seeking $100,000 in damages has been filed against the State Department of Roads in Adams County District Court.

The suit, filed by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Quiggle, alleges two parcels of land condemned by the state in January are worth more than the $16,050 at which appraisers valued the land.

The land is to be used for improvements to Highway 281 near Ayr. The suit is the third filed against the state in connection with the highway improvements.

Two Accidents Add Three Names To Toll

Three persons died in Nebraska traffic accidents this weekend, bringing the 1976 death toll to 70 compared with 77 at this date last year.

A three-vehicle accident claimed the lives of a Randolph couple late Friday on U.S. 81 in Norfolk.

Norfolk police said a car driven by Barbara Petersen, 26, of Norfolk, apparently hit the rear of another car and swerved, colliding head-on with a car driven by Erwin S. Hilkemann, 64, of rural Randolph.

Hilkemann and his 60-year-old wife Elsie were dead on arrival at a Norfolk hospital.

James R. McCoy, 26, of Hartington, was killed early Saturday when his car ran off Route 15 and hit an embankment five miles south of Hartington. He was the only occupant of the car.

In a delayed report, Bret Omara, 17, of Ainsworth, was killed April 5 after his motorcycle collided with another motorcycle on a private drive northeast of Ainsworth.

Hastings Hookup Proposed

Hastings (UPI) — The city council will meet Monday on a proposal to authorize hooking up the police department with a high-band radio communications center.

If approved, the police would be on the same frequency as all law enforcement agencies in Region 13. The system also has less interference than the one presently used by the police department.

The city council has to decide whether the mayor should agree that the city pay its share of the $200,000 cost of the radio center.

Services To Be Tuesday For Real Estate Developer

Memorial services will be 8 p.m. Tuesday at Hodgman-Splain-Roberts Mortuary for Marvin E. Shaffer, long-time civil engineer and Lincoln real estate developer, who died Saturday evening after a long illness.

Born in Alma in 1905, he was a Lincoln resident for 50 years. Shaffer was chief draftsman for the Nebraska Roads Department until 1955 when he resigned to work fulltime in his land development business. He designed most of the subdivisions in Lincoln, as well as many others in Omaha and other cities in Nebraska and Iowa. He designed, built and later sold The Knolls subdivision and the Knolls golf club and restaurant in Lincoln.

He was a member of Masonic Lodge No. 54, A.F. & A.M.

Sesostri Shrine, and Pilgrim Congregational Church, which he helped to found.

Survivors include his wife, Sarah, son, Butler of Omaha, two daughters, Mrs. Bud (Carol) Dunklau, and Ms. Jacquelyn Tidd, both of Lincoln; a brother, F. Butler Shaffer of Lincoln; and six grandchildren.

Sniff, Sniff, Sniff . . . Professor's Panels Get Downright Nosy

SNIFF PANELISTS . . . get whiffs of feedlot odor suppressants.

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

"The human nose is still the best indicator of an odor. Even the scentometer is really just a glass box that depends on a human with a sense of smell as an indicator," said Professor Conrad Gilbertson, an agriculture engineer with the U.S. Department of Agriculture Agriculture Research Service.

Gilbertson is stationed at the University of Nebraska with a primary job of finding ways to control pollution problems related to livestock waste.

Gilbertson is testing commercially available products that are supposed to suppress the odor of livestock manure.

Secretaries, staff people and any visitors who happen to come into the agricultural engineering building on the NU East Campus are recruited for the nose testing session.

These sniff panels have completed three series of tests with some interesting results.

"We found that there was no apparent differences in the ability of smokers and non-smokers to detect odors," he said.

"Women were expected to have keener noses, but so far the men rated more odors as objectionable than women did," he said.

Another surprise is that city folks found the stink from manure less objectionable than people with a farm background.

Plain Tapwater
"Sometimes the mind plays tricks on the nose. We had one lady who rated ordinary tap water as having a very objectionable odor. Apparently, she expected to smell manure so she thought she did," he said.

Early test results indicate there may be some slight advantage in some of the odor suppressant chemicals, but tests are not conclusive at this stage of the study.

"From the practical standpoint of the farmer, the best technique seems to be to cover manure as quickly as possible after spreading it on the land. This controls the odor but it also preserves more of the fertilizer value of the manure," he said.

There evidently are a lot of big city people that have no knowledge whatever about the manure problem. "We have had a reporter from New York who was flabbergasted to learn that cattle in a feedlot actually walk in manure. He was terribly shocked," Gilbertson said.

Lloyd Milke, another NU scientist, said there has been some work aimed at coming up with a mechanical device that could be used to measure odors, so far no real success.

"It only takes one or two parts per billion of an odor in air before some people can detect it. It is going to take a pretty sophisticated device to spot that in the field," he said.

The question of detecting, measuring and controlling feedlot odors is becoming more important to farmers every day. Recent court cases have determined that livestock do produce odors that are offensive under the law.

Court Decisions

"Courts have usually held that the farmer should be given a chance to correct the problem with better management. We have got to find a way to solve some of these management problems for farmers," he said.

Most people would expect more legal problems stemming from odor-caused conflicts between farmers and nonfarm neighbors, but this isn't always so.

"City people tend to expect odors near livestock on a farm. We have had some really sticky cases resulting from disputes between farmers themselves," Gilbertson said.

The first three months of the year are the worst for problems with odors in a feedlot. "It is the moisture in the manure. There are about four gallons of liquid for every head in the feedlot deposited there every day. Add spring rains and melting snow to that and you have a major problem," he said.

"We have got to quit thinking of manure as a problem. It is a valuable resource that can be used as a fertilizer and promises to be a useful livestock feed. We have just got to learn more about it," he said.

Spotlight on Agriculture

By DOMINICK COSTELLO

Where are all those good folks who are yelling at farmers for feeding grain to animals instead of to people?

They should be advised that in the European Common Market the governments have insisted that milk powder be fed to animals rather than be sold in the world market.

The same group government is distilling a lot of wine into alcohol to help farmer prices there.

The Common Market countries have proven one thing. Farmers will raise an overwhelming amount of food if you only pay them to produce. They announced another round of farm price increases to go along with the milk for feed and alcohol from wine announcements. Apparently the alcohol will be used for industrial purposes.

The nation is 200 years old; the Poland China hog is around 100 years old.

A news release on their history indicates the hogs are traceable back to 1816 to the Miami Valley in Butler and Warren Counties of Ohio.

The Shaker Society bought a boar and three sows from a firm in Philadelphia. The hogs were called Big Chinas, but whether they ever were anywhere near China is apparently not known.

The Poland part of the name appears to have come from a breeder who was of Polish ancestry. There is some evidence to suggest some of the hogs ancestry may be found in Russia.

About the only thing that hasn't changed on the pig from the big old fannies I raised as a 4-H youngster is the color. John Wallace, the old Shaker who had a hand in the development of the breed, would be amazed.

The American farmer deserves a share of the credit for the move by Egypt to cut off the Russian government and kick their navy out of Egyptian ports.

A substantial allocation of PL 480 wheat from the U.S. will be feeding a lot of President Anwar El-Sadat's people. Russia can't even feed itself.

A sudden rash of grain elevator explosions is causing experts to ask if the regulations against dust around grain elevators are creating conditions for explosions that kill employees and destroy $51 million dollars worth of elevators in the last two months.

G.A. Martin of United Adjustment Bureau at Kansas City has indicated he believes there could be a connection between the dust regulations and the dust explosions.

Other possible connections are the increased amount of grain handled and the increased amount dried by heat, which tends to make grain brittle and dustier. It may be that elevator personnel have been growing careless.

Whatever the reason, there has been a rash of explosions throughout the nation that needs to be investigated. They are killing people, destroying property and fouling up the grain market.

At least one Iowa hog farmer is said to be using AstroTurf on the floor of his hog house. Keith Kuhn, of Moline, Iowa, claims it is better than carpeting he has been using. He hopes it will prevent injury to the pigs' knees, a problem that humans who "play" on AstroTurf on weekends know a lot about.

Green Thumb, an employment program that uses the low income elderly to get a lot of badly needed public service jobs done while providing funds to older folks who need money and prefer not to take a handout, is not in the President's new budget.

The program has done a lot of good in Nebraska — to the parks and community projects that would not have been accomplished otherwise and also to the older folks who have managed to hang onto their dignity in the midst of poverty.

One of the best projects at a local county Extension office in years was in Seward County last year. It was a workshop to teach young farmers how to do simple animal health chores like vaccinate, castrate and other veterinary jobs most older farmers do themselves.

With the low value of meat animals, the farmer is almost forced to do these things himself because the animal is worth less than any veterinarian must charge for his services.

Farmers, gardeners and anyone with any kind of agricultural problem can find answers at their county agent's office if they ask.

Hypnosis

What's it all about?

James McMillen
Question:
I am a very "strong-willed" person and I wonder if I could be hypnotized. Can everybody be hypnotized?

ANSWER:
Actually, being "strong-willed" or "weak-willed" has nothing to do with it. I have always tried to explain it this way — the better the mind, the better the subject he or she can be. I think many of the worries about achieving hypnosis come from the old mysticism and theatrical image that the hypnotist is going to "take over" your mind. This is utter nonsense and is not at all what happens.

In achieving hypnosis, the hypnotist is a "guide", and the subject is a "worker". The hypnotist will guide you through a sequence of thought patterns, and if you do the thinking he asks, you will achieve a state of hypnosis. If you don't, you won't achieve hypnosis. Obviously then, no one can hypnotize you against your will. For instance, I could ask you for a moment to "think" about the feeling in your right foot — but I couldn't "make" you do this. Therefore, you must want to be hypnotized in order to do the thinking I ask you to do.

Assuming you want to be hypnotized, almost everyone can easily achieve a state of hypnosis and it's a very pleasant experience. Moreover, it's very effective in helping you to restructure your lifestyle as you would wish to improve yourself.

Sniff, Sniff, Sniff . . . Professor's Panels Get Downright Nosy

SNIFF PANELISTS . . . get whiffs of feedlot odor suppressants.

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

"The human nose is still the best indicator of an odor. Even the scentometer is really just a glass box that depends on a human with a sense of smell as an indicator," said Professor Conrad Gilbertson, an agriculture engineer with the U.S. Department of Agriculture Agriculture Research Service. Gilbertson is stationed at the University of Nebraska with a primary job of finding ways to control pollution problems related to livestock waste.

Gilbertson is testing commercially available products that are supposed to suppress the odor of livestock manure.

Secretaries, staff people and any visitors who happen to come into the agricultural engineering building on the NU East Campus are recruited for the nose testing session.

These sniff panels have completed three series of tests with some interesting results.

"We found that there was no apparent differences in the ability of smokers and non-smokers to detect odors," he said.

"Women were expected to have keener noses, but so far the men rated more odors as objectionable than women did," he said.

Another surprise is that city folks found the stink from manure less objectionable than people with a farm background.

Plain Tapwater
"Sometimes the mind plays tricks on the nose. We had one lady who rated ordinary tap water as having a very objectionable odor. Apparently, she expected to smell manure so she thought she did," he said.

Early test results indicate there may be some slight advantage in some of the odor suppressant chemicals, but tests are not conclusive at this stage of the study.

"From the practical standpoint of the farmer, the best technique seems to be to cover manure as quickly as possible after spreading it on the land. This controls the odor but it also preserves more of the fertilizer value of the manure," he said.

There evidently are a lot of big city people that have no knowledge whatever about the manure problem. "We have had a reporter from New York who was flabbergasted to learn that cattle in a feedlot actually walk in manure. He was terribly shocked," Gilbertson said.

Lloyd Milke, another NU scientist, said there has been some work aimed at coming up with a mechanical device that could be used to measure odors; so far no real success.

"It only takes one or two parts per billion of an odor in air before some people can detect it. It is going to take a pretty sophisticated device to spot that in the field," he said.

The question of detecting, measuring and controlling feedlot odors is becoming more important to farmers every day. Recent court cases have determined that livestock do produce odors that are offensive under the law.

Court Decisions
"Courts have usually held that the farmer should be given a chance to correct the problem with better management. We have got to find a way to solve some of these management problems for farmers," he said.

Most people would expect more legal problems stemming from odor-caused conflicts between farmers and nonfarm neighbors, but this isn't always so.

"City people tend to expect odors near livestock on a farm. We have had some really sticky cases resulting from disputes between farmers themselves," Gilbertson said.

The first three months of the year are the worst for problems with odors in a feedlot. "It is the moisture in the manure. There are about four gallons of liquid for every head in the feedlot deposited there every day. Add spring rains and melting snow to that and you have a major problem," he said.

"We have got to quit thinking of manure as a problem. It is a valuable resource that can be used as a fertilizer and promises to be a useful livestock feed. We have just got to learn more about it," he said.

Where are all those good folks who are yelling at farmers for feeding grain to animals instead of to people?

They should be advised that in the European Common Market the governments have insisted that milk powder be fed to animals rather than be sold in the world market.

The same group government is distilling a lot of wine into alcohol to help farmer prices there.

The Common Market countries have proven one thing. Farmers will raise an overwhelming amount of food if you only pay them to produce.

They announced another round of farm price increases to go along with the milk for feed and alcohol from wine announcements. Apparently the alcohol will be used for industrial purposes.

The nation is 200 years old; the Poland China hog is around 100 years old.

A news release on their history indicates the hogs are traceable back to 1816 to the Miami Valley in Butler and Warren Counties of Ohio.

The Shaker Society bought a boar and three sows from a firm in Philadelphia. The hogs were called Big Chinas, but whether they ever were anywhere near China is apparently not known.

The Poland part of the name appears to have come from a breeder who was of Polish ancestry. There is some evidence to suggest some of the hogs ancestry may be found in Russia.

About the only thing that hasn't changed on the pig from the big old fatties I raised as a 4-H youngster is the color. John Wallace, the old Shaker who had a hand in the development of the breed, would be amazed.

A sudden rash of grain elevator explosions is causing experts to ask if the regulations against dust around grain elevators are creating conditions for explosions that kill employees and destroy $51 million dollars worth of elevators in the last two months.

G.A. Martin of United Adjustment Bureau at Kansas City has indicated he believes there could be a connection between the dust regulations and the dust explosions.

Other possible connections are the increased amount of grain handled and the increased amount dried by heat, which tends to make grain brittle and dustier. It may be that elevator personnel have been growing careless.

Whatever the reason, there has been a rash of explosions throughout the nation that needs to be investigated. They are killing people, destroying property and fouling up the grain market.

Consumers Lay In Eggs While Hens Are Layin'

If the hen put all her eggs in one basket, the egg might never have become the prime symbol of Easter.

In fact, if the little hen didn't actually lay more eggs in the spring of the year, the 40% increased demand for eggs the week before Easter might never be met and some baskets might go unfilled.

Although it might not be nice to fool Mother Nature, the poultry industry sometimes has to fool the hen with lighting tricks in order to meet the year-round demands for eggs. But spring with its added daylight hours automatically increases egg production.

Doyle H. Free, general manager of Nebraska Poultry Industries, Inc., said he didn't think there is ever a time when food supply will be in perfect balance with demand, so the industry must adjust its processing accordingly.

In the week before Easter, according to a 10-year study, egg sales are boosted 41% over the average; in the week prior to that sales are up 14%.

However, the week after Easter, the study shows the skyrocketing demand plunges to 20% below the average.

As in all commodities, supply and demand affect the price, and eggs, which are in less demand and better supply between Easter and Memorial Day, are usually cheapest during that period.

During periods of great supply and little demand, more of the eggs are further processed into cake mixes and other prepared and convenience foods, while during peak usage periods such as Easter, the eggs are reverted to shell egg usage.

Even if the large-size eggs are a few cents more expensive than the smaller ones, they're usually the best buy during the productive spring months, according to Free.

He said some 70% of the eggs a hen lays are of the larger variety. Providing the price spread is not more than five cents a dozen, the larger eggs are the better buy because the extra weight and volume from those eggs nets the consumer more for his money.

Most of the eggs are packaged fresh, according to Free, and if people want to take advantage of lower prices before the Easter rush on eggs, it is safe to buy the eggs a week or 10 days prior to Easter as long as they're refrigerated.

Customs Rooted In Antiquity

That lady in the Easter bonnet with all the frills upon it in Irving Berlin's great song, "Easter Parade" perhaps didn't know it, but she was continuing a custom rooted in antiquity. Centuries ago the New Year officially began in spring, and people marked the occasion by donning new clothes.

Research expert Sally Hopkins of Hallmark Cards says the wearing of new garments to signify a new beginning was soon followed by superstitions about the custom. "Wearing new clothes led to the idea of parading in them," Hopkins says. "In America, folklore has it that good luck can be ensured for the year by wearing three new things on Easter Day."

Easter parades occur in almost every city and town in America but perhaps the most famous — and the subject of that 1948 song and movie — is on Fifth Avenue in New York City.

"It dates back to the mid-19th century," says Hopkins. "Originally it was confined to high society, with the wealthy walking or riding in their carriages down Broadway after morning church services."

Both the hare and the egg were symbols of Easter, the goddess of spring, who incidentally lent her name to the occasion. Over the years the hare has become a rabbit but the egg, the age-old emblem of birth and rebirth, hasn't changed.

Immigrants also brought such traditional Easter games as the egg hunt and egg roll with them from Europe.

HENS . . . lay more in spring

And how long is it safe to keep those hard-cooked eggs after the youngsters have delighted at the sight of each brightly-colored gem Easter morning?

Dr. Glenn Froning, chairman of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln poultry and wildlife science department, says there will be no problem with the eggs if they're kept refrigerated for a week or 10 days after Easter.

However, he noted, unrefrigerated eggs could become a problem after a period of five or six days.

Tips On Cooking, Peeling Hard-Boiled Eggs

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

If you've struggled to peel the shell from a hard-cooked egg without damaging the egg itself, here's a simple tip!

Before hard-cooking the egg, merely puncture the large end of the egg with a thumbtack to separate the membrane from the shell during cooking and allow the shell to peel away easily.

If eggs are very fresh, this method makes shelling much easier. Also, if the eggs are cooked promptly and thoroughly in cold water after cooking, the shells will be much easier to remove. This cooling method also prevents dark surfaces on egg yolks.

To avoid the gray-green discoloration of egg yolks, caused by the chemical reaction of iron in the yolk and hydrogen sulfide from the sulfur in the white, avoid overcooking at too high a temperature and plunge the cooked egg immediately into cold water.

Hard cooked eggs are never boiled and should be cooked at a temperature just below the boiling point of water — 185 to 194 degrees F.

Cooking eggs at high temperatures or for too long a time at any temperature also causes the protein of egg whites to shrink, lose moisture and become rubbery.

Here are the two recommended methods for successfully hard-cooking eggs:

BOILING WATER METHOD

1. Prick large end of shell with thumbtack.

2. Place cold eggs in dish of lukewarm water to prevent cracked shells.

3. Bring water in saucepan to rapid boiling, using enough water to come one inch above eggs.

4. Transfer eggs from warm water to boiling water with spoon.

5. Reduce heat to keep water below simmering and hold for 20 minutes.

6. Cool eggs promptly and thoroughly in cold water. (This makes the shells easier to remove and helps prevent dark surface on yolks.)

COLD WATER METHOD

1. Prick large ends of shells with thumbtack.

2. Cover eggs in pan with enough water to come at least one inch above the eggs.

3. Bring rapidly to boiling.

4. Turn off heat or set pan off unit to prevent further boiling.

5. Cover and let stand in hot water for 15 minutes.

6. Cool immediately and thoroughly in cold water. (This makes shells easier to remove and helps prevent dark surface on yolks.)

Eggs Can Be Dyed In Onion Skins

If you'd like to try a different method of dyeing Easter eggs, you might cook the eggs with onion skins or grass wrapped around the shells.

Latvians use either yellow or red onion skins, or a combination of both, for a wider range of color for dyeing their eggs.

Merely wrap skins around each of the eggs in a small piece of cloth such as a piece of an old bed sheet, tie up the wrapped egg and hard cook as you would any egg.

To insure ease in peeling the skins from the eggs after they are cooked, rinse them in cool water and set aside to dry.

Throughout Bohemia, Moravia and Slovakia, the eggs are dyed in this manner and then painted with a variety of subjects ranging from nature to religious motifs.

In Czechoslovakia the custom is to don native costumes and the women give their favorite "kraslice" or decorated Easter egg to their favorite friends of the opposite sex.

Throughout Bohemia, Moravia and Slovakia, the eggs are dyed in this manner and then painted with a variety of subjects ranging from nature to religious motifs.

In Czechoslovakia the custom is to don native costumes and the women give their favorite "kraslice" or decorated Easter egg to their favorite friends of the opposite sex.

Waterproofing Claims Phony

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

If you spent some $1,000 for basement waterproofing and have the makings of a swimming pool in your basement, you may be able to do nothing but tread water with your 10-year guarantee.

The Nebraska Consumer Protection Division of the State Attorney General's office and the Cornhusker Better Business Bureau warn Nebraskans to be on the lookout for fraudulent basement waterproofing operations which begin to make their appearances with spring rains.

Both offices already this year have received complaints on such companies, and some of the firms which misrepresent their work and guarantee to Nebraskans in the last two years are now out of business. The customers are left holding a worthless 10-year-guarantee along with a swimming pool in their basements.

An action brought by the Consumer Protection Division is also pending in Lancaster District Court against a firm which has since gone bankrupt, and that office is investigating other questionable operations circulating throughout the state.

Attorney General Paul Douglas advises consumers to be careful when contracting with waterproofing companies and to contact the Consumer Protection Division of his office if problems arise.

The Better Business Bureau recommends verifying the experiences of local customers and checking that office for information on the firm.

In some localities waterproofing firms have gone out of business or closed their local branches, rendering their guarantees worthless according to the Better Business Bureau.

Several complaints against three firms on file and under investigation by the Consumer Protection Division show that all involve the use of pressure pumping or "no digging" methods of basement waterproofing.

One complaint, for example, alleged that the homeowner signed a contract for basement waterproofing at a cost of $1,300. The project was begun one day, and the following day it rained resulting in "more water in the basement than it had ever had before."

The homeowner alleged that the firm was called, and within a week the company workmen returned and did the work over but during this time the company had compressor trouble resulting in "too much pressure being placed on my basement wall causing the wall to push inward."

According to the complaint, the company assured the homeowner that everything would be fine but the next time it rained we had the makings of a swimming pool in the basement and the water literally gushed through the walls.

Efforts to have the company repair the walls and stop the leaks were in vain so the homeowner hired a construction firm to repair the damage.

In the pending court action the Consumer Protection Division alleges that the defendant Hydro-Tech Systems, Inc., engaged in unfair and deceptive practices in violation of the Consumer Protection Act.

Specifically, the suit charges that the firm deceptively advertised and represented that bentonite pressure pumping process would effectively eliminate basement water leakage in most basements, and that the basement water leakage could be cured effectively without removal of dirt from the exterior walls and additional construction work.

The firm allegedly used a guarantee which it has refused and failed to honor and which contains conditions and restrictions which reduce the guarantee "to a mere sham," according to the petition.

The Council for Better Business Bureaus Inc. has issued a report on basement waterproofing by soil injection methods which states that one popular post-construction waterproofing method is to pump a sodium bentonite slurry into the soil adjacent to the foundation.

Unless the soil's composition or chemistry neutralizes it, the bentonite should swell to many times its dry volume, filling cracks where water has found access to the basement interior, but undetected underground barriers such as rocks, wood, etc., can seriously impair the effective use of this compound.

The skill of the engineer directing the injection operation has a strong bearing on the success of the venture.

Sodium bentonite injection may prove ineffective in compacted clay because such soils may resist the forming of an effective water barrier and in certain areas, the chemical content of the soil may neutralize bentonite's swelling and sealing properties.

Because of the growing problem with basement waterproofing misrepresentations to consumers, some states have adopted laws specifically regulating these operations.

For example, Wisconsin has adopted legislation regulating the advertising and use of ineffective waterproofing methods.

The Wisconsin law specifies that pressure pumping "no digging" methods can only be used in connection with a favorable analysis by a professional engineer.

One of the operations under investigation in Nebraska requires that a 90-day period pass before any resurfacing is done, and a large percentage of individuals who have purchased the company's services have had no success in the firm's return to remedy continuing basement water leakage problems.

The Nebraska Consumer Protection Division is a part of the office of the attorney general of Nebraska. Persons wishing to contact the division can do so through the attorney general's office at the State Capitol.

Ideas Differ On Wife's 'Surprise'

DEAR ABBY — Your reply to that wife who prettied herself up and laid down on the sofa with nothing on because her husband called and said he was bringing her a surprise was silly.

Why shouldn't a man be furious with his wife for pulling such a stupid stunt?

Husbands often bring home unexpected company. To find his wife stretched out on the sofa without a stitch on when he opens the door accompanied by two business associates would embarrass any man with an ounce of brains.

In recent years it seems that more people are obsessed with the idea of parading around naked. I guess maybe they don't realize that most folks look a lot better with something on.

Sure I think the husband should forgive her but maybe he has taught her a good lesson for being so vain and self-centered. I'll bet if the situation had been reversed and the wife came home with two of her lady friends to find her husband stretched out on the sofa naked as a jaybird, that wife would have been furious.

DEAR PUZZLED You could be right, but my mail has been running 50 to one in favor of the wife. Read on.

Christmas so she prettied her self up and stretched out (sans clothes) on the sofa as a surprise for him.

Abby that husband must be crazy. How lucky can a man be to come home with two business associates to a pitcher of cold martinis and a wife stretched out naked on the sofa? He must be the envy of his entire company. I can't understand why he should be upset with her. SHE should be upset with him for putting her in that embarrassing situation. That husband should hot-foot it to his local jeweler for those diamond earrings.

She gets my vote for being an ideal wife and if you won't tell MY wife I'll make her those earrings myself.

PENNSYLVANIA JEWELER DEAR ABBY I'm with you. That husband who came home to the wife who wanted to surprise him because he said he was bringing HER a surprise had no right to be furious with her.

Opening lead - ace of hearts.

This extraordinary deal occurred in the final round of the Reisinger team of four national championship played in New Orleans last November. The 100 teams who entered the event had dwindled to 11 by the time the sixth and final round was reached.

At every one of the ten tables where the hand was played, the North-South pair got to six spades even though they were missing the A-K-x of trumps!

Not only that, but three declarers made the slam!

The deal must surely rank as one of the most striking examples of utter ineffectiveness among top-ranking players ever witnessed in the long history of the game.

At one table, the bidding went as shown. In all fairness, it must be said that South's six spade bid in this sequence was surely acceptable. From his view, it seemed extremely likely that North had either the ace or king of spades (possibly both) and either the ace of hearts or a void in hearts.

West doubled and led the ace of hearts. Declarer ruffed in dummy, played a diamond to the ace, and returned the queen of spades. West, afraid that declarer had the A-Q-J-x-x of spades and was trying to put something over on him, played the king of spades on the queen and South wound up making the slam doubled.

Two other declarers made the slam on a similar line of play — one of them was doubled and the other was not — but the other seven declarers quietly went down one in six spades. They all had bitten off more than they could chew!

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SIDNEY OMARR

Monday, April 12, 1976
I recently had a visit from a boyhood friend, now a distinguished physician. The doctor said, 'If you don't feel like diving out, just show me the kitchen. Cooking is my hobby!' I expressed surprise. 'Why the surprise?' he asked. 'I shrugged. 'You should know, he said, that I was born in July. I told him I knew and he looked at me, declaring, 'Just let a Cancer lose in the kitchen and only good can come of it!' The doctor's lovely daughter, son and wife quickly vouched for his culinary skills. I told him I wasn't aware that he had become interested in astrology. I don't know about astrology, he smiled. 'But I do know that the best chefs, the cooks who put their hearts in it are born under Cancer!' P.S. The dinner was superb.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Practical methods dominate. Be direct, specific — move services to others — and get best possible deal for yourself too. Message should become strikingly clear. Lunar position emphasizes general health, employment with relative ease.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Emphasis on revitalization. You will attract young persons and those with youthful concepts. Popularity increases, especially with opposite sex. Be ready for changes, attractions, sharpened emotional responses. Gemini. Virgo may be in picture.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Home, basic experiences, tasks — steps toward security are accentuated. You get chance to improve surroundings, especially at home base. Do not force issues. If diplomatic, you get necessary cooperation. Taurus, Libra might be involved.
CANCER (June 21-July 21) Accent on movement, quick decisions, short trips. You get chance to rectify recent mistake. In effect, you have proverbial napoleon. Make most of it. Pisces, Virgo could be featured. A relative who gossips may unknowingly do short facts.
LEO (July 22-Aug. 22) Emphasis on finances, getting most for money — and obtaining additional funds. Organize priorities. Make business arrangements. Added responsibility could bring greater return. Figure Cancer, Capricorn in-dividual's reward prominently.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Lunar cycle

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to split out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 4 or more subtract 4. If the number is less than 4, add 4. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Morning Briefing

Buffalo's McAdoo Nets Title

Bob McAdoo wrapped up his third straight NBA scoring championship, hitting six of his game-high 34 points in the last two and a half minutes Sunday to lead Buffalo to a 99-96 season-ending victory over the Kansas City Kings.

Kansas City finished 31-51, third in the Midwest Division and out of the playoffs.

Other Basketball

The Indiana Pacers have lost reserve forward Charlie Jordan for the remainder of the ABA playoffs with torn ligaments in his knee.

The United States national women's basketball team, led by Lusia Harris of Delta State, completed an unbeaten six-game tour of Taiwan, defeating Cathay's girls' team 69-55 before a crowd of 9,000.

Baseball

The labor problems of the owners and players apparently haven't dimmed the interest of the fans. The attendance for the first 12 opening day games of the 1976 season was up 21 per cent over last year's. An average of 40,162 or 481,939 fans, attended the inaugurals, with Cleveland leading the way with 58,478 fans. That was the largest opening day crowd in the major leagues in three years.

A doubleheader at Chicago with Kansas City was postponed due to cold weather, as were two other games, Detroit at Cleveland and New York at Milwaukee.

Racing

James Hunt of Britain drove his Marlboro McLaren to victory in the Graham Hill International Trophy motor race and set a lap record for the 2.89-mile track, at 133.95 m.p.h.

Johnny Cecotto of Venezuela easily won the international 200-mile motorcycle race, beating Steve Baker of the United States. Both rode Yamahas.

Hans-Joachim Stuck of West Germany, at the wheel of a March-BMW, won the Jim Clark Memorial auto race in the European Formula II championship.

Other Sports

Franklin Mieleu and not Wayne Valley is said to have the inside track to wind up as the new owner of the San Francisco 49ers. Mieleu, who owns 100 per cent of the Golden State Warriors, is one of nine limited 49ers partners and confirmed that he is trying to buy the team and is awaiting from the general partners.

Soviet boxer Igor Vysotsky knocked out Olympic and world amateur heavyweight boxing champion Teofilo Stevenson of Cuba in the third round of a bout in Minsk.

Muhammad Ali staged a quick about-face in favor of the "little people" when he refused to cross picket lines set up by striking NBC technicians and news writers. Ali seemed to ignore the pickets when he first arrived and said he didn't know what it was all about, but then turned back.

Defending champion Jane Blalock of the United States fired a five-under-par 69 in the final round to capture the $6,600 first prize in the fourth World Ladies Professional Golf championship.

Britain lost one of its top four-footed prospects for the Summer Olympics when Wideawake died of a brain hemorrhage shortly after Queen Elizabeth II awarded his rider, Lucinda Prior-Palmer, first prize in a three-day equestrian event.

Harold Solomon ended Ken Rosewall's dream for a second straight River Oaks tennis title by slaying his way to a 6-4, 1-6, 6-1 victory.

Pearson Wins Rebel

DARLINGTON, S. C. (AP) — David Pearson used new-found power to run away from Buddy Baker for victory in Sunday's 20th annual Rebel 500, a destruction derby that might have ended on a tragic note, but for a heroic act by Dale Inman.

Inman, crew chief for Richard Petty, rushed to the aid of rookie Jerry Sisco, whose Chevrolet crashed into the straightaway wall and burst into flames. Inman ran onto the track and pulled the dazed driver to safety as fire crews arrived on the scene.

It was the first fire in recent memory on a National Association of Stock Car Auto Racing Grand National car, which are equipped with almost indestructible fuel cells. However, another one ruptured, without a fire, last month on Petty's car in a crash at Bristol, Tenn.

Sisco's wreck was the worst of several pileups that helped slow Baker's average speed of 122.973 miles per hour.

Baker, in the lead early in the race, suffered considerable front end damage on his car in a four-car pileup. After a quick pit stop, he was back in the hunt, going as fast as before, and looked a sure winner until the last pit stop.

The constant caution periods through the first half of the race kept the leaders fairly close. But Baker's superior speed put his challengers farther and farther behind, as few problems slowed the later stages.

Pole winner Pearson, who lost a lap at one point with a tire problem, rallied his Mercury to a five-length victory after a caution period with about 20 laps left.

Finley Discloses Salary Demands

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Outfielder Reggie Jackson turned down a three-year, $525,000 offer from Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley before he was traded to the Baltimore Orioles, the San Francisco Examiner reported Sunday.

Finley, hospitalized in Chicago for possible back surgery, told the newspaper in a telephone interview that Jackson demanded $750,000 for the three-year period.

"I offered him a three-year contract calling for $150,000 the first year, $175,000 the second and $200,000 the third year," said the controversial Finley.

Finley claimed Jackson seemed pleased with the offer. But later, Finley said, Jackson's agent Gary Walker called him back "with a condition to add to it."

"He said Jackson would sign provided I included an additional $75,000 on a deferred basis, payable 10 years from now," Finley said. "You may think I'm kidding, but I'm not. That's what he wanted."

Finley said he felt his original offer "was more than fair." "After all, Jackson hit only .250 last year. He is no superstar except in his eyes."

Jackson was placed on Baltimore's disqualified list Friday after failing to appear for the Oriole's opening game with the Boston Red Sox. Jackson had said that he wants to play for Baltimore but at a higher salary than the estimated $140,000 he was paid last year by the A's.

Baltimore General Manager Hank Peters said the disqualified status would be removed as soon as Jackson reports to the club. But as of Sunday, the Orioles said Jackson had not given any indication when he would report.

Meanwhile, Finley said that pitcher Ken Holtzman, who went to Baltimore in the same six-man deal last week, was offered a $2,000 raise on his $93,000 1976 contract.

The A's still have a number of unsigned players. Finley gave the newspaper these details of their demands:

Joe Rudi: was paid $84,000 last year, offered $90,000 this year, asking a three-year, no-cut contract of $115,000 the first year, $135,000 the second and $150,000 the third or a one-year contract for $125,000;

Gene Tenace: paid $51,000 last year, offered $65,000 this year, asking a three-year no-cut contract of $85,000 the first year, $105,000 the second and $130,000 the third or a one-year contract for $100,000;

Rollie Fingers: the ace reliever got $89,000 last year, offered $90,000, wants two-year contract of $130,000 the first year and $180,000 the second or one year for $145,000;

Bert Campaneris: received $90,000 last year, offered the same this year, asking for a five-year contract at $135,000; Sal Bando: Got $100,000 last year, offered a 20 per cent cut after a disappointing season.

San Antonio Romp Evens Series

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — San Antonio's leading scorer James Silas was knocked out of the playoffs with a fractured ankle, but ex-Nets Larry Kenon hit 30 points and George Gervin, playing with a heavily bandaged shooting hand, notched 22 Sunday to help the Spurs even their best-of-seven ABA series against the New York Nets at one game apiece with a 105-79 romp.

Gervin, the lanky 6-foot-6 forward who took Silas' spot in the backcourt after x-rays showed the all-star guard had chipped a bone in his ankle Friday night, received solid support from the three ex-Nets who came to San Antonio in a pre-season trade.

The loss gave New York visions of another playoff disaster. The Nets, who won so easily, 118-101 Friday night, were sloppy in a half-hearted effort before a meager audience of 5,789 Sunday. Last year the same thing happened when, after beating St. Louis in the first game of the opening round,

Lincolmites Capture Medals

Omaha — Lincolmites Treeva Quarells and Jay Jordan won gold medals in the Midwestern AAU Junior Olympics Judo Championships Sunday afternoon at the UNO Fieldhouse.

Quarells won the intermediate girls division while Jordan took top honors in the junior boys lightweight division.

Other members of the Sho-Rei-Kan team placing in the meet included Mark Czajkowski, bronze in the bantam boys; Cleve O'Neal silver in the junior boys lightweight; Tim Roseberry, bronze junior lightweight; Tom Spain, silver in the junior boys heavyweight and Rex Jordan bronze in the boys intermediate.

All seven medalists qualified for the Junior Olympic Championships in Minnesota in either late April or early May.

Fuerst Gains Track Honors

Larry Fuerst dominated the 40-49 age group in the Lincoln Track Club's all-comers meet Sunday at Nebraska Wesleyan's O.N. Magee Stadium.

Fuerst won the shot put, discus, high jump, the 100-yard and 220-yard dashes. His time in the 100 was :11.7 and in the 220, :22.3.

Events were run in the masters form.

The Lincoln Track Club will join with the Lincoln YMCA and the University of Nebraska to sponsor the second annual All Good and Jolly Jog-a-thon, April 24 at Ed Weir Stadium on the Nebraska campus at 9 a.m.

Pearson Wins Rebel

DARLINGTON, S. C. (AP) — David Pearson used new-found power to run away from Buddy Baker for victory in Sunday's 20th annual Rebel 500, a destruction derby that might have ended on a tragic note, but for a heroic act by Dale Inman.

Inman, crew chief for Richard Petty, rushed to the aid of rookie Jerry Sisco, whose Chevrolet crashed into the straightaway wall and burst into flames. Inman ran onto the track and pulled the dazed driver to safety as fire crews arrived on the scene.

It was the first fire in recent memory on a National Association of Stock Car Auto Racing Grand National car, which are equipped with almost indestructible fuel cells. However, another one ruptured, without a fire, last month on Petty's car in a crash at Bristol, Tenn.

Sisco's wreck was the worst of several pileups that helped slow Baker's average speed of 122.973 miles per hour.

Baker, in the lead early in the race, suffered considerable front end damage on his car in a four-car pileup. After a quick pit stop, he was back in the hunt, going as fast as before, and looked a sure winner until the last pit stop.

The constant caution periods through the first half of the race kept the leaders fairly close. But Baker's superior speed put his challengers farther and farther behind, as few problems slowed the later stages.

Pole winner Pearson, who lost a lap at one point with a tire problem, rallied his Mercury to a five-length victory after a caution period with about 20 laps left.

Finley Discloses Salary Demands

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Outfielder Reggie Jackson turned down a three-year, $525,000 offer from Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley before he was traded to the Baltimore Orioles, the San Francisco Examiner reported Sunday.

Finley, hospitalized in Chicago for possible back surgery, told the newspaper in a telephone interview that Jackson demanded $750,000 for the three-year period.

"I offered him a three-year contract calling for $150,000 the first year, $175,000 the second and $200,000 the third year," said the controversial Finley.

Finley claimed Jackson seemed pleased with the offer. But later, Finley said, Jackson's agent Gary Walker called him back "with a condition to add to it."

"He said Jackson would sign provided I included an additional $75,000 on a deferred basis, payable 10 years from now," Finley said. "You may think I'm kidding, but I'm not. That's what he wanted."

Finley said he felt his original offer "was more than fair."

"After all, Jackson hit only .250 last year. He is no superstar except in his eyes."

Jackson was placed on Baltimore's disqualified list Friday after failing to appear for the Oriole's opening game with the Boston Red Sox. Jackson had said that he wants to play for Baltimore but at a higher salary than the estimated $140,000 he was paid last year by the A's.

Baltimore General Manager Hank Peters said the disqualified status would be removed as soon as Jackson reports to the club. But as of Sunday, the Orioles said Jackson had not given any indication when he would report.

Meanwhile, Finley said that pitcher Ken Holtzman, who went to Baltimore in the same six-man deal last week, was offered a $2,000 raise on his $93,000 1975 contract.

The A's still have a number of unsigned players. Finley gave the newspaper these details of their demands:

Joe Rudi: was paid $84,000 last year, offered $90,000 this year, asking a three-year, no-cut contract of $115,000 the first year, $135,000 the second and $150,000 the third or a one-year contract for $125,000;

Gene Tenace: paid $51,000 last year, offered $65,000 this year, asking a three-year no-cut contract of $85,000 the first year, $105,000 the second and $130,000 the third or a one-year contract for $100,000;

Rollie Fingers: the ace reliever got $89,000 last year, offered $90,000, wants two-year contract of $130,000 the first year and $180,000 the second or one year for $145,000;

Bert Campaneris: received $90,000 last year, offered the same this year, asking for a five-year contract at $135,000;

Sal Bando: Got $100,000 last year, offered a 20 per cent cut after a disappointing season.

San Antonio Romp Evens Series

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — San Antonio's leading scorer James Silas was knocked out of the playoffs with a fractured ankle, but ex-Nets Larry Kenon hit 30 points and George Gervin, playing with a heavily damaged shooting hand, notched 22 Sunday to help the Spurs even their best-of-seven ABA series against the New York Nets at one game apiece with a 105-79 romp.

Gervin, the lanky 6-foot-6 forward who took Silas' spot in the backcourt after x-rays showed the all-star guard had chipped a bone in his ankle Friday night, received solid support from the three ex-Nets who came to San Antonio in a pre-season trade.

The loss gave New York visions of another playoff dis-
